They're coming

I am in shock — I agree with something Donald Trump said (sort of). After his (second) indictment, the former president said, “They’re coming after you.” He’s right, if by “they” he meant his right-wing contingent is coming after women, their partners, teens who are struggling with their gender and the parents who love them, people of color and their supporters, librarians and teachers, health providers, Medicaid-insured individuals, performers who make a living as drag queens, the entire LGBTQ community, police officers who defended the U.S. Capitol, immigrants and their families fleeing abuse and poverty, and even members of our military.

Oh yes, they are coming to get us. Fueled by hatred in words and deeds, MAGA followers convince themselves they are the ones wronged like their leader. As Chris Christie said (better late than never), maybe Trump and his followers should look hard in that mirror, just like the wicked queen in Snow White, and face reality before it is too late for all of us.
