10 STEPS TO HOME OWNERSHIP

Ready to learn about what it takes to become a homeowner? While it may seem like a tough process if you are a first-time home buyer, we are here to help guide you and make the process easy and effortless.

Gather Your Down Payment

The very first step in buying your new home is to figure out your finances and start saving for your down payment.

While 20% down is ideal to avoid any extra fees such as mortgage insurance, many first time home buyers will qualify for 5% down for the first 500k.

You will want to speak to a mortgage lender early on to decide what loan type you should save for.

Main Loan Types

Conventional

A conventional loan, is any type of home buyer's loan that a bank or credit union will finance, as long as the buyer has good credit and reliable income. Conventional mortgages are mortgages for 20% or more down payment

Insured Mortgages

Insured mortgages are similar to Conventional loans, but accept less than 20% down. These mortgages are covered by the Mortgage Default Insurance Administration and allow down payments as low as 5% for the first 500k.

B-Lenders

B Lenders are lenders who are more lenient with qualification but offer 1-2% higher interest rate.

Private Lenders

Private Lenders are lenders that are unregulated and require very little for qualification. However, they offer very high interest rates. This lender is advisable to use for short period of time.

Check Your Credit Score

Your credit score helps determine the interest rate and other costs you pay on a mortgage loan.

If your credit scores are high, it tells lenders that you've paid your credit card bills on time, haven't "maxed out" your credit cards, and so on. Lenders see you as likely to pay your loan payments consistently and on time. They see you as a low-risk investment and offer you a lower interest rate and other costs on your loan.

You can qualify for certain loans with a low credit score of 530. But don't forget, you will be paying higher interest rates and insurance.

For example, If the 30-year primary mortgage rate is 3.875%, someone with good credit would pay 4.125% in interest (.25% above the primary rate) and you'll pay 4.5%. Your monthly payment will be $82.99 more each month and $29,876.40 more over the 30-year life of the loan.

It is a good idea to work on your credit if you have a low score and plan to buy a home.

Some ways to increase your credit score is to start by getting your credit report and verifying the information. Dispute any errors. Next, avoid new credit card purchases or applications and pay off past due balances and existing credit card debts, starting with the highest interest rates first. Do not close any of your accounts, as your credit history plays an important part in your score.

Get Pre-Approved For A Mortgage

Before you head out to look at homes, you will want to know exactly how much home you can afford or how much you want to spend on a monthly payment. This depends on what you are approved for.

You may think that you will want to spend $400,000 on a new home, but a lender may think otherwise. You may also qualify for $500,000, but not want to make the higher payment that comes with borrowing more money.

Make sure to get pre-approved by your lender and not just pre-qualified . A pre-approval will give you your exact loan terms and will be required when making an offer.

It will require you to complete a mortgage application. where the lender will check paperwork such as your w-2, paystubs, bank statements and tax returns. They will also check your credit and employment history. All of this will determine how much a bank will approve you for, and at what interest rate.

Hire A Buyer's Agent

Buying a house is a very exciting time and one that buyers should prepare for. Whether it's preparing to get a mortgage or shopping for houses, a buyers agent will guide you and help you avoid making any mistakes that could cause many future headaches.

Most houses that are being sold will have an agent representing the seller, which is frequently referred to as a listing agent or sellers agent. The listing agents main responsibility is to make sure the sellers best interests are being protected. Therefore, you will want an agent to represent you, and be looking out for YOUR best interests.

And best part is....it's free! It does not cost you anything to hire and work with a buyers agent. The seller pays your agent their commission. So why wouldn't you want to hire a buyers agent?

Tips For Working With Your Agent:

Make Your Expectations Known

Rely Only On Your Agent To Show You All Properties

Ask About Contracts Before You Sign, If You Do Not Understand

Be Ready to Buy

Time To Shop For A Home

Once you've chosen to work with a buyers agent, you will want to discuss your needs and wants in your new home. You should have some ideas of non-negotiable's, but you may need to be more flexible with your wants if you are competing in a sellers market.

Your agent can set up your home search requirements so that you can be notified immediately when a home hits the market and meets your needs and wants list.

When a house you want to see comes on the market, your agent will set up a property showing for you.

MAKE AN OFFER

Once you've found a home that you've fallen in love with, it's time to make an offer.

Making an offer is basically sending a proposal to the seller's agent, who presents it to the home seller. If they like your terms and conditions made in the offer, they will accept it. If not, they will counter back with their own terms and conditions.

Once an offer is accepted, it is signed and legally binding. It is important that your offer contain all requirements, as there will be no going back to make changes.

GET A HOME INSPECTION

A home inspection is a must when buying a home and often required when using a loan to finance. This is a direct buyer cost and most home inspectors charge a few hundred dollars for their service.

A home inspection will be done by a professional, who will check for anything that may be wrong with the house. Think mold, leaky roof, faulty foundation. They also mark minor things, such as missing tiles in the bathroom or broken seals around the faucet.

After the inspection is complete, you will get a full report on the home and any faulty findings. Should something come up, you have an opportunity to ask the seller to fix the issue, back out of the contract, or decide to fix them after you move in.

Most lenders however, will require major issues to be fixed before they will sign off on the loan.

GET A HOME APPRAISAL

A home appraisal is needed if you are financing your home. It is required by the bank to estimate the home's value.

Just because you and the seller agreed to a price, doesn't mean that the bank will. After all, the home is their collateral in case you can't make your mortgage payment. The bank can then foreclose on you and resell the home.

If the home is appraised over the contract price, the seller will need to either come down in price, or you will have the choice to make up the difference with cash, or you may back out of the deal.

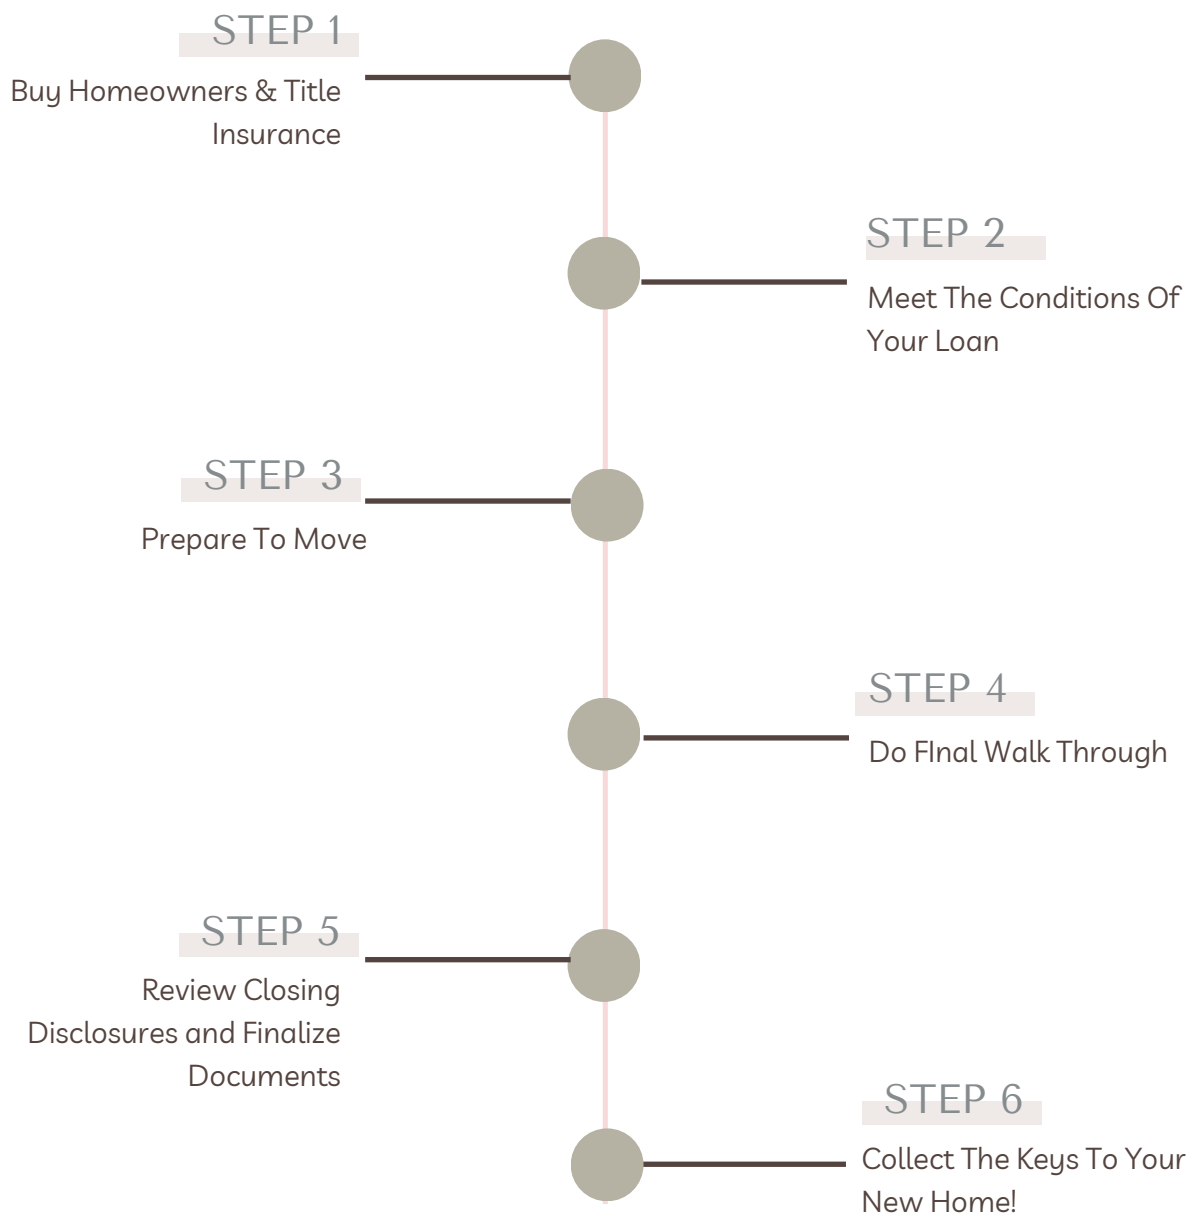

An appraisal is a good thing for a buyer overall. It will keep you from falling in to a bad deal and over paying.

Final Steps To Close

Before you get the keys handed over to you on closing day, you will need to take these steps to finalize on your home,

Your Homeowner and Title insurance will happen through Escrow, along with meeting the conditions of your loan, such as paying your down payment and finalizing your loan. You will then want to start packing up your current home and hire movers

Next, you will walk through your new home before closing, to make sure that the home has been vacated and left in acceptable condition. After that, you will finalize all your documents and close on escrow. Congratulations! You are now a homeowner!
