ARTIST STATEMENT

With color pencils, I have the ability to create the shape, color, and detail I envision in my art and focus on realism. I want viewers to see more than they thought was originally there. In my practice, I take what may be considered ordinary and make it extraordinary.

I have done many group and solo shows, demonstrations, workshops and outdoor art fairs. I have also published two books of my art with drawing techniques and tips; “Life is in the Details” and “Life is in the Details Vol II.”

My work has also been featured in art publications, newspapers, and on television.

I want to thank my wife for her understanding and support with all the many hours I spent drawing.

I also want to thank Christine Oleson for the excellent framing.

About the art: This series of renderings are from the Chicago Botanical Gardens. I chose to remove the backgrounds and use black to isolate the flower. It added to the impact of the rendering.

The renderings on page 2 & 3 are on white paper.

About the art: Impressionism is a form of expressive painting that Monet did best.

This series of color pencil renderings is my attempt at creating a painterly look with a pencil.
