

San Luis Rey Valley.

The Star has some interesting notes from points in the valley: Rev. Mr. Camp has just completed at Corral de Luz quite a fine residence, and is now engaged setting out an orchard and vineyard, and has planted some alfalfa. He has just finished a nice honey house, and will engage in the bee business.

There is some talk of a new road between the Corral de Luz and Fall Brook depot, about five miles. The people of the former place now have to go twelve to fifteen miles out of the way to get to a shipping point.

A. L. Stewart, son-in-law of D. R. Foss, has just completed one of the finest appointed honey houses in the county. He has planted a vineyard and orchard and will also plant about one acre and a-half in blackberries.
