

San Diego Rural Schools Make Fine Showing of Exhibits at County Fair

The schools of San Diego county are giving their fifth annual exhibit at the county fair in building No. 10, Balboa park. The space for this exhibit has been donated by the Bank of Italy and the Southern Trust and Commerce bank.

Visitors to the fair especially interested in the schools are declaring that this present exhibit is the best yet staged by the county schools. All varieties of hand work, representing art, domestic science, manual training, nature study and the commercial and vocations activities, are in evidence. Special attention has been drawn to the Del Mar amples of this type of work done by many schools. The De Luz school has mounted a unique exhibit of maps making use of ferns and foliage as a medium. They also exhibit a United States flag, the stripes made of fern fronds, and the stars apparently the tiny blossoms of the olive tree. The space assigned to the Miramar school greets the public by a unique sign, the cut-out spaces forming the letters having been left to the bees, and filled with honey comb.
