

What Is a Microschool?

A micro school is an inventive solution that blends many of the best elements of public, private, and even homeschooling to create a positive learning experience for learners of all kinds. A micro school is a learning center that's dedicated to serving students on an individual basis through small, in-person classrooms where students are free to reach their full potential.

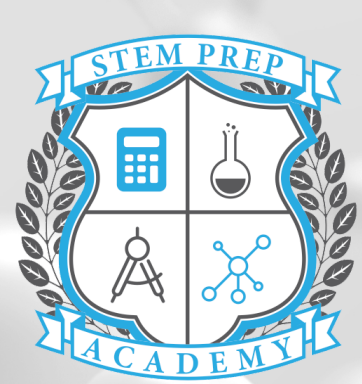

We know how important personalized education is, which is why we want to bring the benefits of the individualized micro school model to you. With schools for students PREK-4th grade, we're here to help your students build a solid educational foundation.

Here are some crucial things that set SPA micro schools apart:

Parents and educators actually work together to cultivate areas of interest for each individual student based on their passions. We want to provide an educational experience that is fully personalized to what you and your student need.

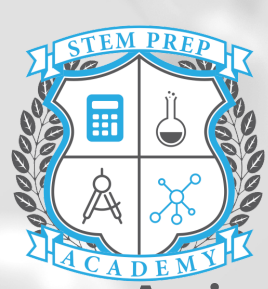

Our curriculum is also more flexible, so our educators are free to adapt the curriculum so students can explore, discover, and innovate. We'll follow your student's interests, focus on areas you'd like to see them grow, and support them as they pursue their dreams.

Here are some crucial things that set SPA micro schools apart:

In a micro school, students study their core curriculum over just a few hours each day. This means that the teacher is free to coach, guide, and mentor the students to make sure that they're understanding the core content.

In the afternoon, the student is free to explore their own areas of interest with the guidance of their teacher so they can learn real-life skills and pursue their passions. For instance, students may practice coding and robotics, write or play music, or learn about business. This way, they can get hands-on experience developing their unique talents in an educational setting.

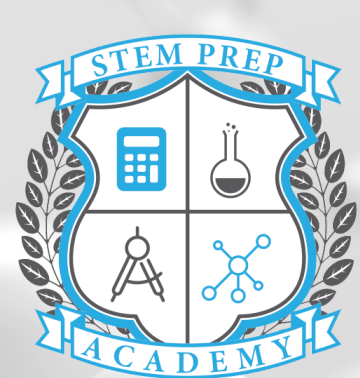

An important part of education is creating a learning environment where interest and excitement about learning are celebrated. Students shouldn't dread going to school – they should be excited to go! Part of this process involves allowing children to pursue topics they're interested in through project-based learning.

Some examples of this might include:

- A student who is interested in video production would spend some time each day learning how to use video software, and posts their films online.
- A student who loves to draw might practice every day, building a portfolio and eventually entering a local art show.
- A student who enjoys writing can put together their own book and then release it on Amazon.

Each day, the students at SPA micro schools spend time working on their interests both individually as well as in small groups with other students.

This helps them learn teamwork and develop the necessary social skills for tackling problems and coming up with solutions.

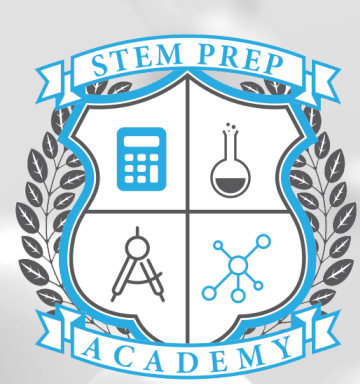

Here are some crucial things that set SPA micro schools apart:

SPA is able to serve students with a wide range of diverse needs! Micro schools offer the flexibility, time, and attention to get students the support they need.

Do you have a child who has difficulty with reading comprehension? Micro schools may offer the right environment to help your child to get the specific instruction that they need.

Is the one-size-fits-all curriculum not challenging enough for your student? At our micro schools, they can be challenged to excel in their education while they make real-world connections.

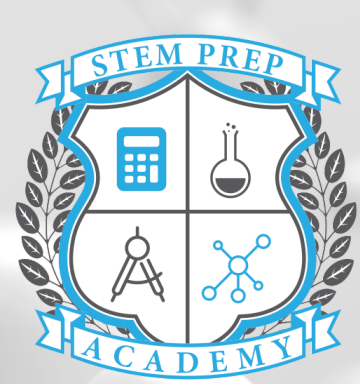

Our doors are open to all students – that's why we'll factor your finances into your tuition. While tuition helps us do what we love to do, we believe that tuition should never be a barrier between a student and quality, individualized education.

Here are some crucial things that set SPA micro schools apart:

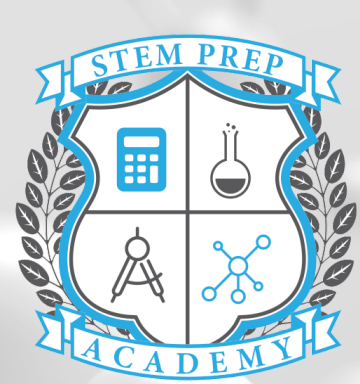

Sadly, many parents don't know a lot about what their children are learning in school. SPA is here to help bring parents back into their children's education. Parents are viewed as partners in the learning process, not bystanders.

With SPA, parents serve as ambassadors and are also empowered to take an active role in their children's education, helping them to truly love and get excited about school.

Here are some crucial things that set SPA micro schools apart:

Due to the lockdowns, school closures, and out-of-the-ordinary school years since 2020, many students have been left behind. There are huge gaps in learning and understanding, some of which could take years to make up for. Our micro schools are convenient, dedicated, and effective solutions that can help bridge this gap.

Who Are Microschools For?

SPA Micro schools are for students who want to go to a school that puts them first. Our students are challenged to make real-world connections between what they learn in school and what they can do with what they learn outside of the classroom.

SPA is also for parents who want their children to thrive and receive the personalized learning instruction they need to succeed at each grade level. If you want to take an active role in your child's education and are ready to be inspired, you're in the right place.
