THE 7 C's OF RESILIENCE

The seven Cs model of being resilient is focused on building hardiness in youth

COMPETENCE—Possessing the necessary skills to confidently face adversity and having opportunities to practice these skills.

CONFIDENCE—Children need to be confident so they can cope with the challenges of life, find solutions and recover from setbacks.

CONNECTION—Building strong relationships caring adults and friends encourage feelings of being valued, belonging and safety.

CHARACTER—Helps youth build their sense of self-worth, values and morals and enables them to tell right from wrong.

CONTRIBUTION—Volunteering to help others and build community contributes to stronger feelings of well-being and self-worth.

COPING—Developing important self-regulation skills can help youth deal better with the stressors and overcoming the challenges of life.

CONTROL—As youth learn they control of their decisions and behavior, they are empowered to overcoming life's challenges.

THE DANGER TO OUR YOUTH HAS NEVER BEEN GREATER!

In 2023, the DEA has seized enough street fentanyl to kill every person in America. Street fentanyl can be 50 times stronger than heroin and is the most deadly drug threat currently facing the U.S. Two milligrams of street fentanyl (enough to fit on the tip of a pencil is considered a potentially deadly dose. (the guardian.com)

Parents Are the GREATEST Influence in Their Children's Decisions to Experiment With Substances

One of the most influential factors during a child's adolescence is maintaining a strong, open relationship with a parent. When parents create supportive and nurturing environments, children make better decisions. Though it may not always seem like it, children really hear their parents' concerns, which is why it's important that parents discuss the risks of using alcohol and other drugs. Be open and honest. Talk early and often! (samhsa.gov)
