

SISTERS IN ENERGY

Naomi Amaha

Naomi has a decade of experience in the realms of advocacy, civic engagement and nonprofit leadership. Her journey in the energy sector began in 2020, where she embarked on a path driven by her commitment to sustainability and equity. Initially rooted in the nonprofit world, Naomi's passion led her to assume the role of Director of Policy and Government Affairs at the Denver Foundation. Additionally, she is the Co-chair of the Sustainable Transportation Committee for the City and County of Denver, a position aimed at helping the city meet its climate goals while navigating barriers, seizing opportunities, and utilizing resources. She also sits on the boards of numerous organizations to which she offers her expertise.

Naomi is continually engaged in the clean energy transition at both state and city levels, and acts as a valuable resource, offering her insights to nonprofits and partners alike. At the beginning of this year, Naomi was named one of Denver Business Journal's 40 Under 40 for reaching a high level of achievement for both her professional and volunteer work within the Denver community.

Naomi's personal commitment to sustainability, including the adoption of an electric vehicle and the electrification of her home, highlights her dedication to walking the talk and inspiring others to do the same. Both her professional expertise and personal endeavors have positioned Naomi as a trusted resource and advocate among her peers.

Motivated by societal shifts, organizational potential, and a sense of responsibility towards marginalized communities, Naomi remains committed to her pursuit of justice and opportunity. In 2024, her sights are set on seizing federal funding opportunities and broadening engagement to support impactful change to governmental policy.

For Naomi, the recognition of receiving the Sisters in Energy Award goes beyond her personal achievements. It serves as a conduit for increased representation in an industry where Black women remain underrepresented. With humility and gratitude, Naomi acknowledges the collective support from mentors and sponsors who believed in her abilities and pushed her forward. As she continues to lead by example, Naomi's impact will create pathways towards a more sustainable and equitable future for all.
