Foolish!: Wendy Spragge

A harsh word, do you think? I'm sure we could all own the word 'Foolish' at least once or twice during our lives and head the fact we had been so foolish. Something we regret. Something we did against our grain. We wish we could reverse and action or take back what we said as it created a negative response or result. Why are we so foolish to do things that could harm ourselves or others without thinking about the consequences? Hopefully down the road of life we grow in wisdom to protect ourselves and others from foolishness. A kind word, practical advice, a lot of love of others and ourselves should or could prevent a foolish decision. This sounds like a foolish response to the writing about the word/action 'foolish'. Maybe not?
