

Story of the cups

Cruising through the Cups:
the cards of creativity, love emotion, & intuition.

@superlunaristarot

---

The Ace is a new beginning in matters of the heart. The Universe is offering us a seed of love, should we choose to plant it.

This can be a new relationship,
a new heart-centered project,
or anything blossoming
from wishes of the heart.

@superlunaristarot

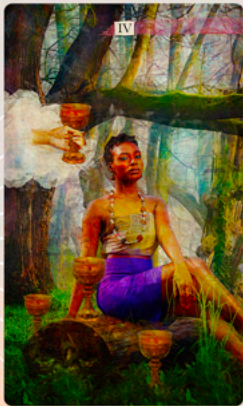

---

In the Two, the seed has been planted, nurtured, and has blossomed into a loving spiritual union, a balanced relationship of equal give and take. We are blessed with harmony, support, bonding and partnership on our heart-centered journey.

In the Three, our love has fully matured and now we have the opportunity to celebrate the first abundant harvest together in joy and communion with others. We raise our cups, dance and rejoice in our success together.

In the Four, we've had all of our fun, and now we're feeling a bit over it all and restless. Another blessing is being offered to us from the universe, but we are unable to see its value due to our own apathy as we gaze at the cups on the ground.

In the Five, our apathy turns to sorrow over three spilled cups. We've suffered a great loss and are burdened in mourning. As we grieve over what we've lost, it will be some time before we can look back at what still remains in our other two standing cups.

In the Six, we take a look back at our past and allow ourselves a trip down memory lane. Whether we're surrounded by childhood recollections or entertaining old old friends, it can be easy to get stuck in fond moments of nostalgia.

In the Seven we've allowed our mind to drift too far and now our head is completely in the clouds! We may be a bit detached from reality, fantasizing about many outcomes, worrying over 'what ifs', or faced with too many choices.

In the Eight, we've come back down to reality to make a difficult decision: that our current situation is no longer working for us and it is time for major change! Though it's painful, we walk away from it all and seek higher ground.

In the Nine, our decision to let go pays off, because our dream comes true! We made a wish and now we're living it up to the nines! We made space in our life for something more aligned to come in and now it's finally arrived!

In the ten, once we get a feel for what emotional fulfillment feels like in the nine, love and support extends in all directions. We create harmony in all other areas of our life.

We fill our home with the people and circumstances that make it the most joyful, hopeful and well lived. We complete the cycle in true harmony and happiness.

The cycle begins again.

@superlunaristarot