

Tarot Stories

by @superlunaristarot

Here I'll teach you tarot by telling you a story about each suit!

The Wands represent action, movement, passion and creativity.

The Ace is a new beginning in activity/movement. The Universe is offering us a spark of passion and energy that we must seize to initiate action.

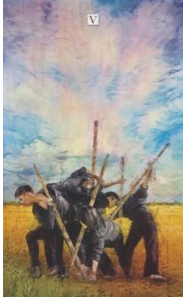

In the Two, we have seized that energy and now have to choose which direction we want to move in with all of this potential.

In the Three, we've chosen our path and now we're seeing some results. Our ships are coming into harbor and we're waiting for a little more information to come in on where to go next.

In the Four, we see even more success, and we get an opportunity to pause on our efforts and celebrate how far we've come. This celebration can take many forms, and is usually seen as a 'homecoming', but we must remember that there is more work to be done.

In the Five, we're at it again but there is some conflict going on. Things are not organized, there's interference, it's like 5 different songs playing at once.

In the Six, we've gotten it together, we're celebrating victory, and we're finally starting to get the recognition we deserve for all of our hard work.

In the Seven, our victory caused people to take notice. We have to stand our ground, defend our views and stand firm in our beliefs in order to push through.

In the Eight, things are moving forward quickly and everything is falling into place.

In the Nine, we've reached a point of exhaustion. We're a little beat up, but we have one more fight left in us. We will persevere!

In the Ten, we stood strong and have reached the end of the cycle. We're carrying around too much and must delegate or put some things down in order to see our path clearly.

The cycle begins again.

The Cups represent emotions, love, creativity and intuition.

The Ace is a new beginning in matters of the heart. The Universe is offering us a seed of love, should we choose to receive it. This can be a new relationship, a new heart centered project, or anything blossoming around wishes made from our heart.

In the Two, the seed has been planted, nurtured, and has blossomed into a spiritual union. Two has become one, and the love given to us from the universe has blossomed into a balanced relationship of equal give and take. We are blessed with companionship or balance on our heart-centered journey.

In the Three, now our love has fully bloomed and we have the opportunity to celebrate our first harvest of abundance together in joy and communion with others. We raise our cups, dance and rejoice in our success together.

In the Four, we've had all of our fun, and now we're feeling a bit restless and over it all. Due to feelings of apathy, we are unable to see a new blessing that is being offered to us from the universe. Instead, we gaze in discontent at the cups on the ground.

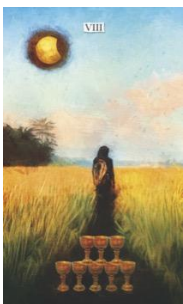

Our apathy turns to sorrow in the Five, as we've spilled three cups. We've suffered a great loss and are burdened in mourning. As we grieve over what we've lost, it will be some time before we can look back at what still remains in our other two cups still standing.

We take a look back at our past in the Six and allow ourselves a trip down memory lane. Whether we're enmeshed in childhood memories or entertaining people from our past, we may find ourselves lost in nostalgia.

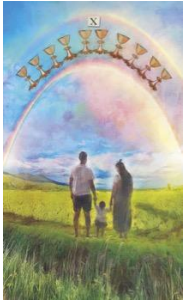

Our minds have drifted too far in the Seven, and now our head is completely in the clouds! We may be a bit detached from reality, fantasizing about many outcomes, worrying over the 'what ifs', or faced with many choices. Some grounding is needed.

We come back down to reality in the Eight and it is time to make a difficult decision: our current situation is no longer working for us and it is time to move on! Though it's painful, we walk away and seek higher ground.

In the Nine, our decision to let go pays off, because our dreams have been fulfilled! In this “wish” card, our dreams have come true and we are living it up to the nines! We made space in our life for something more aligned to come in and now it’s arrived!

After we get a taste of what makes us feel emotionally fulfilled in the nine, love and support extends in all directions in the Ten. We create harmony in all other areas of our life. We fill our home with the people and circumstances that make it the most joyful, hopeful and well lived. We complete the cycle in true harmony and emotional fulfillment at home.

The cycle begins again.

The Swords represent aspects of the mind: thoughts, beliefs, communication, and ideas.

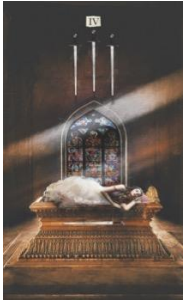

The Ace is a new beginning in mindset. The Universe is cutting through the clouds with a giant sword, clearing the way for an intellectual breakthrough to occur. Mental clarity, a revelation of truth or new ideas come through to move us forward into a new opportunity.

In the Two, our new mindset has challenged our old ways of thinking. A difficult choice must be made. We might try to avoid making it, but it doesn’t go away.

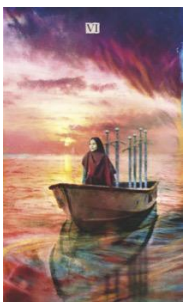

In the Three, whether we've made our choice or avoided it all together, our situation has resulted in deep heartache and pain. During these times of pain, it is important to look at how our thoughts affect our feelings and to hold space for them.

In the Four, after getting through the pain we realize it is time for some much needed rest and recuperation. We retreat to a quiet place of solitude for necessary healing and recovery, and we turn our attention inward.

In the Five, we emerge from our peaceful shelter to find that our external environment has become riddled with conflict and tension. Egos are competing, but no one wins these wars. We must pick and choose our battles wisely and try to escape this negative energy unscathed.

In the Six, we have packed our bags and made our escape! We are moving away from difficulty and into calmer waters. While we look out at what new possibilities await over the horizon, we must not carry any of that negative energy along with us, only the tools we've acquired and the valuable lessons we've learned.

In the Seven, we've made it safely to land, but being in unknown territory has us feeling the need to keep our guard up, and requires new strategies for survival. Dishonesty is afoot and we're being extra cautious. Sneaky or cunning behavior is being used by us, or those around us.

In the Eight, all of the previous disillusionment has led to our own mental entrapment. Our negative thinking has confused us into believing that we are stuck and have no options. These are only self-imposed restrictions, and we hold the power within our mind to break free.

In the Nine, our fear goes unchecked and we continue down the spiral of anxiety and worry, losing our grip on reality. These are all just nightmares, but our unfounded fears have taken control and lead us to a dark night of the soul.

In the Ten, we have reached the painful ending of our mental anguish. We've hit rock bottom, have been defeated or betrayed, or have reached a dead end. Though this may be the darkest hour before dawn, the sun will rise again.

The cycle begins again.

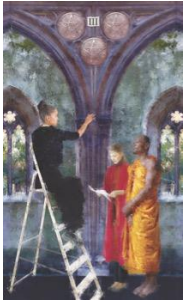

The Pentacles represent our physical world, finances, health and spiritual path.

The Ace is a new beginning in your physical domain. The universe gifts us a new business opportunity, a windfall of prosperity, restored health or a new spiritual path.

In the Two, we are pausing to figure out how we will balance our new matters with our existing work. We're happily juggling things now but we must balance our time and energy carefully.

In the Three, we decide to bring people in to help, and we invest in our new path through collaboration and education. We study our course carefully and work with others to build our skills.

In the Four, after investing our time and energy we become fearful that our resources are being tapped. We clutch on to what we have tightly and protect our energy from being expended. We are worried about our stability but might be being too stingy.

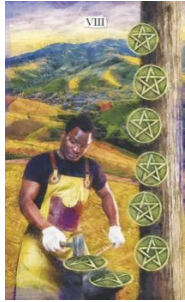

In the Five our fears of loss have materialized. We face hardships and our struggle makes us feel forgotten by the Universe. At this moment we feel unseen and left out in the cold, but we must remember that we can always reach out for help.

In the Six, a good samaritan comes along with a charitable gift that restores our balance. There is an equal give-and-take transaction that helps get us up off the ground and back in action.

In the Seven, we're pausing for a moment to look at what we've cultivated and consider our path ahead. We may feel like things aren't moving fast enough, but our hard work is paying off. We look at our investments and make long-term plans.

In the Eight, we decide to devote ourselves to mastering our trade. We put all of our focus and dedication into the work we love, and our hard work leads to self-mastery.

In the Nine, all of that work pays off and we have achieved a life of luxury and abundance! We are self-sufficient and fulfilled knowing that we've made all of the right choices to achieve this independent wealth.

In the Ten, all of our previous investments reach a new level of abundance and security. We have enough to share with those around us. We've built a strong foundation and our legacy is strong enough to serve generations to come. The cycle begins again.

If you enjoyed this tarot learning resource, you can get more at superlunaris.com/downloads

Also check out our new guidebook Tarot Threads: A Simplified Journey Through the Celtic Cross, your gateway to better tarot readings! By providing an easy-to-follow approach to the Celtic Cross spread, you'll be empowered with enough support to unlock your intuition!

Shop our Etsy. Follow us on Facebook, Instagram and Tiktok!

