How the Courts Silence Disabled Americans Without Lawyers

“IF THIS CAN HAPPEN WITH VERIFIED FILINGS, COURT RECORDS, AND DIGITAL EVIDENCE — THEN THE SYSTEM IS RIGGED BY DESIGN.”

Washington, DC – May 26, 2025 —

In Feldman v. Ivy, a federal lawsuit filed in the U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia, a disabled litigant is asking the court to recognize the truth: that the justice system is structurally inaccessible to those without lawyers — and has been for over a century.

Dr. Daniel J. Feldman, a clinical neuropsychologist and federal whistleblower, filed the lawsuit after being evicted during an 8-day hospitalization for a stroke. At the time, he had filed over seven verified emergency motions, a federal removal, and ADA accommodation requests — all of which were either ignored, blocked by clerks, or never reviewed.

“This is what happens when you don’t have a lawyer,” said Feldman. “The courts don’t care what evidence you have. They just don’t want to hear it.”

What the Case Proves

Feldman’s filings — across Kentucky and California — were procedurally sound, medically supported, and verifiably submitted. Yet:

- No hearing was granted.
- No order was cited.
- Opposing attorneys were allowed to reintroduce proven slander from another case.
- The sheriff enforced a writ during a federal stay.
- His ADA-authorized representative — his 81-year-old mother — was trespassed from the property.

Meanwhile, all opposing parties were represented by lawyers who submitted filings electronically and received court responses within hours.

A System Designed to Fail You Without a Lawyer

The lawsuit points out what court insiders have known for years:

- Unrepresented litigants are held to stricter standards.
- Their filings are delayed, blocked, or ignored entirely.
- Court staff and judges presume incompetence by default.

And when the unrepresented party is disabled — as Feldman is — the barriers multiply.

The Case Number That Could Make History

Filed as 1:25-CV-00657 on May 23, 2025, the case asks the court to do something rare: admit that a disabled, unrepresented litigant with verified evidence can be ignored by design — and that this violates not only due process, but the Fourteenth Amendment itself.

The lawsuit doesn't just ask for justice in Feldman's case — it demands a nationwide stay on all court proceedings where one party has a lawyer and the other doesn't.

"This isn't a court error," said Feldman. "It's a court policy. And if I can't win this case, with this record, then no one else ever will."
