Professional Career Planning Guidance for Senior High School Students

About the Service

The final year of high school is very challenging for students. For many, it's the first time in their lives that they must make a choice with truly far-reaching consequences. Knowing what viable job options are out there, their educational requirements, and what's currently in demand is a formidable task. Before making the biggest choice of their life, students should first make a concerted effort to understand their own highest values. If their career choice speaks to their highest values, they will feel inspired by their work, and success will soon follow.

Aside from being a seasoned high school teacher and award-winning debate coach Tamer Higazi, B.Ed. also has years' experience guiding senior students as they prepare to cross over from high school to post-secondary education. Tamer has his Guidance Counselor credentials from Queen's University.

"My daughter, like so many others, was faced with the challenge of what to apply for at the various Colleges and Universities. She had no idea what she wanted to do with the rest of her life. Tamer dove into her personality traits, her likes and dislikes, along with her personal values and together they compiled a list of possible career options that on our own, we never would have even had on our radar. With this additional information at hand, it has made this process a lot easier to work through. We are now confident that we are researching and applying to the correct programs thanks to Tamer's assistance."
