Moors Visit Oyate Nation

The Moors of Oakland Temple no.1 in California went to visit Chief Ernie Longwalker of the Oyate Nation. Chief Ernie Longwalker is known for his coast to coast walk from San Francisco to Washington D.C. in the fight for indigenous rights and humans rights. The Chief turned 90 years old on March 14 and we Moors were invited to celebrate with the Oyate Nation. Warrior Woman, the Chief's wife greeted us with love and great hospitality. I immediately noticed some updates to the land from the last time we came to visit. The family was congregating at the kitchen area, where I notice a fresh coat of purple paint on the building. Warrior woman was finishing up the stairs with a small paint brush as she smiled at our arrival. We were embraced with a welcoming greeting of "Islam". At the kitchen were other visitors for the celebration. There was beautiful children running around enjoying the sun and playing in nature, collecting sticks and eating fruits. Something we don't see often in the city. The Chief was at the table giving wisdom to anyone in ears reach. Speaking on and teaching about his lifelong fight with injustice with the government. Longwalker stood in defense with other leaders such as Muammar Gaddafi, Dr. Khalid Mohammed and Louis Farrakhan. They formed and united together to uplift the oppressed people of the land. What's most surprising about the Chief is his sense of humor. As he tells of his memories and experiences of his journey, he always slips in a perfectly timed joke to keep the attention of the listeners. Families convened over a fire and prepared for the overnight stay.

Tents were set up under the brightly lit star night. A few Moors debated on what star systems they recognized. In nature, an abundance of more celestial sightings are seen by the naked eye. Shooting stars and constellations were on full display throughout the night. As sun rose, the fajr prayer was made by Moors practicing Ramadan. The morning was busy and wood was needed for the upcoming celebration. A few good Moors set out to chop lumber essential for daily life for the nation. Using an ax to cut wood was something new for most of us. Interestingly enough, swinging the ax was very therapeutic. Like reenacting a ancient tradition of our forefathers. We returned with the lumber to the tribe as they ate breakfast and analyzed the details of the coming ceremony for Chief Longwalker. The ceremony is ancient and sacred and evolves hunting and a sweat lodge spiritual ritual. Living in nature for a couple of days was very grounding and beneficial. It helped us see the vision of living off the grid and being self sufficient. Chief Ernie Longwalker is a pioneer, a true soldier in the fight for Love Truth Peace Freedom and Justice and give great honors to his sacrifice and investment to the movement. Happy Solar Return Chief! We love you! Islam 🇲🇪
