Profile

I am a mixed media artist sharing my studio between Castle Rock, Colorado and Mumbai, India. I have a profound love for the captivating beauty of nature and amalgamates the essence of vivid charm of botanical life in my artworks. Each of my pieces is a unique blend of botanical markings, signature patterns and a breathtaking array of bright hues.

Inspiration:

I believe, there is a beat running quietly through every leaf and stem, and that rhythm is what I try to capture visually. I don't paint plants as they appear in nature — I paint how they feel. The movement, energy, and quiet intensity of leaves and flowers become abstract forms, almost like a visual heartbeat. Curves, gestures, layers, and pulses of colour emerge from moments that exist between growth and decay — pauses that often go unnoticed but carry deep presence.

In last few years, my practice has evolved through both movement and stillness — shaped by the vibrant impressions of plants encountered in travel and deepened by the quiet, intimate observation of nature at home during Covid. What began as an exploration of external landscapes gradually became an internal dialogue with memory and presence, allowing the work to hold both expansiveness and contemplation while tracing nature's subtle, persistent pulse.

At its core, my body of work is an invitation to slow down. To reconnect with nature, even in an abstract way, and to rediscover wonder in everyday surroundings. Nature doesn't ask us to travel far to be moved. Inspiration lives everywhere, from distant journeys to the quiet life growing just outside our doors.

My work is a reminder that even in stillness, there is movement — and within that movement, a rhythm waiting to be felt.

My work can be found in private collections across US, Europe, UK, Canada, and India. I am currently represented by:
