CSI campers, including Jordan Chavis (right), study fingerprinting techniques during the week-long camp at Saint Leo.

The second annual event takes high schoolers into the world of forensic science and crime scene investigation

By Andy Warrener Sports Reporter

The campus of Saint Leo University in San Antonio was quiet and nearly desolate with most students away on summer vacation. Yet, in the shadow of the College of Business Building, several students extended and contracted tape measures and took notes, looking like a survey crew at first glance. On closer examination, the students were not university students, they are upcoming high school juniors and seniors who signed up to take the CSI Summer Camp hosted by Saint Leo University.

What the students behind the College of Business Building were doing was creating what's called baseline sketches of a crime scene. Pieces of yellow tape were set about the area representing evidence and campers were tasked with creating a baseline sketch of where the evidence was. They take measurements from a baseline, a common straight line through the crime scene like the edge of a sidewalk or a hallway inside a house, and plot them on an "x" and "y" axis in order to create a sketch or rough draft of a crime scene.

"This rough draft will help them be able to create a model in a courtroom," Criminal Justice Instructor Charlotte Braziel said. "They are going to produce demonstrable evidence. Part of the lesson also is realizing it's hard work."

Enduring the punishing sun with her campers, Braziel comes from 26 years of experience with the FBI and is a former senior team leader for the Tampa Evidence Response Team. Other university staff members teach the different sections of the week-long camp where campers stay on campus the whole week, ready to jump into another workshop, visit a mock crime scene or even visit the Pasco County Sheriff's Body Farm in Land O' Lakes.

Other staffers include former defense attorney Dr. Joseph Cillo, Dr. Karin May, with over 20 experience in law enforcement, as well Cartrell Strong, a state champion in the triple jump, and the boys weightlifting team headed a list of top athletes from Zephyrhills to be named to the All-Sunshine Athletic Conference teams for spring sports.

Among others topping the lists in their respective sports were tennis players from Wiregrass Ranch and Pasco, as well as lacrosse players from Wiregrass Ranch and Cypress Creek. Lacrosse became a sanctioned sport by the Florida High School Athletic Association this season.

Strong, a 2019 graduate and three-sport athlete who also played football and basketball, excelled in track and field. He won a state title in the triple jump recently cracked the top six in that event during a national competition in the Miami area.

"He had a pretty successful year," said Zephyrhills track coach Bryan Thomas, who also starred in track as a former Bulldog. "He was pretty dominant in the county. He was a leader, not just by example, but he was vocal."

Strong was the field athlete of the year and Wesley Chapel's Donte Sol was the track athlete of the year. Strong won four events — the 100-meter run, long jump, triple jump and 4x100 relay — during the district meet to account for 40 points.

In boys weightlifting, Zephyrhills was rewarded as the top team and Chris Barrick was named the top coach following the Bulldogs' conference victory.

In tennis, the Wiregrass Ranch boys and Pasco girls were rewarded for winning district titles. They

Saint Leo robotics camp challenges boys and girls alike

Second session is girls overnight camp to promote bonding and learning

By Steve Lee Sports Reporter

The first of two robotics camps at Saint Leo University to place this week with a second session for a different group scheduled for next week. The camps, taught by Saint Leo math professor Dr. Monika Kiss, are in their fifth year at the university's main campus.

"I decided that maybe it would be fun for Saint Leo to host academic camps," she said, noting that the university has always had its share of athletic camps during the summer months. "I love it. I couldn't do this for a living, but it's a lot of fun. I get to be in a position to inspire (students) to think outside the box."

This week's camp for boys and girls focused on building robots and getting them to work, which several youngsters said proved to be as challenging as it was enjoyable.

Arianna Ruiz said she registered for the camp because she likes "just mostly everything about it. I thought it would be fun to build robots and talk to people."

"I do something for Ödyssey of the Mind, so I wanted to kind of improve my skills with hands-on building," Sayuri Ranatunga said.

Like that creative problem-solving program Ranatunga is involved in, Marcos Montero, who worked on a robot alongside Talia Fernandez, also had experience with robotics before taking this week's camp at Saint Leo.

Wealth of Health

The effects of UV rays on the eyes

The sun can be both friend and foe. A warm, sunny day can improve mood and increase levels of vitamin D in the body. Exposure to sunlight during the day also can help regulate the body's natural sleep-wake cycle, known as the circadian rhythm. However, overexposure to the sun can be dangerous as Many people recognize that exposure to the sun can lead to sunburn and long-standing skin damage, but they may not realize that the eyes also are susceptible to damage caused by the sun. The eye health resource All About Vision warns that extended exposure to the sun's UV rays has been linked to significant eye problems, including cataracts, macular degeneration, pinguecula, pterygia, and photokeratitis. UV rays come in three types: A, B and C.

The atmosphere's ozone layer blocks virtually all UVC rays, which are the most potent, but UVA and UVB can be dangerous when exposure to the sun is significant.

Exposure to excessive amounts of UV radiation over a short period of time can cause photokeratitis, which is essentially a sunburn of the eye that can cause pain and redness. Prolonged exposure to UV rays without adequate protection may cause lasting damage, says the American Optometric Association. UV rays come from both the sun itself and tanning beds.

Here's a look at some of the common UVinduced eye conditions.

• Cataracts: A clouding of the eye's natural lens, or the part of the eye that focuses the light a person sees.

• Macular degeneration: UV rays may lead to macular degeneration, which is a leading cause of vision loss for older people. The macula is the center portion of the retina, essential for vision.

• Pterygium: This is a growth that begins on the white of the eye and may involve

Stephanie Morales, who worked on her robot with partner Brody Kravetz at a nearby table, also thought the camp was "kind of fun. It's just cool to put (the robot) together."

The skies over the Pasco County Fairgrounds will be dark this Fourth of July as Sparklebration, the annual Fourth of July Festival and Fireworks show, has been canceled for 2019.

'Sparklebration has gotten too costly for the non-profit fair association," said R.J. Huss, president of the Pasco County Fair Association. "It was just becoming hard to obtain sponsorship for the one- day event, and spectators would not help support Sparklebration by purchasing admission tickets and paying for parking. It seemed that 90 percent of the folks wanted to watch from the roadside, or from a parking lot two miles

The Pasco County Fair Board of Directors voted not to host the event in March, at their monthly meeting. The non-profit organization relied on admission from the gate, parking, and sponsorships to off-set the cost of producing Sparklebration.

"The last two years we have seen a decline in gate and parking sales, so with no support money-wise from attendees, we had to cut something from the budget. Unfortunately, this was Sparklebration," Huss, and the Pasco County Fair Board said.

The Pasco County Fair Association was founded in the 1947 by five local businessmen. The fair association has remained an independent, non-profit organization since it's founding and relies primarily on sponsorship, along with fair memberships, revenue from our guests, and rental income from the buildings housed on the fairgrounds to operate and maintain the fairgrounds throughout the year, and produce the annual county fair held in February each

"We are sorry to see this wonderful event go away this year," Huss, and the Pasco County Fair Board continued, "but we have to be good stewards of the association's money and Sparklebraiton is an expensive event to produce. "This notification will give folks time to make other plans for the their 4th of July festivias Dr. Robert Sullivan, a retired Pasco Sheriff captain with 27 years of service.

"The camp really exposes students to the whole gamut of crime scene management, special programs manager Nikki Heister said. The camp is also specialized. You never know what it might be that sparks the student's interest. It could be forensic, crime scene technology, investigative, legal.'

Aiden Kinney of Pasco High School, was busy on Tuesday morning, working on his baseline sketch with his team.

"What we're working on here is a rough draft that we'll put into a computer program and be able to present in court," Kinney said. "One of the reasons we work in teams is so that it's more than one person's word or observa-

The medical aspect of crime scene investigation really attracted Kinney, as he is in a certified nursing program at Pasco High.

Across the street from the main campus, the Crime Scene House was stocked with another group of campers learning fingerprinting. This workshop was taught by Dr. Sullivan and in it, students learned to first define what fingerprints are, identify types of fingerprints, identify physical and chemical methods for enhancing latent fingerprints, collection of said fingerprints and processing evidence to locate and collect them.

The students used a device called a Henry Glass, a type of magnifying glass with a light illuminating the viewing area to get a close up view of the print. One of the students in the class had their fingerprints on a dry erase board and students were tasked with determining which one it was.

Laila Huffman of Zephyrhills High School, took one of the prints off the dry earse board and transferred it to a card for further examination. She is in the criminal justice program at

"It's just an interest I have," Huffman said.

"It's a fun thing to do." The camp brought Mount Dora Academy student Jordan Chavis back after attending last summer's camp. "I grew up watching crime shows and ID

TV," Chavis said. "I like every aspect of it." Students learned about the AFIS or automated fingerprint identification system, a nation-wide database of fingerprints from people booked into jail, military and law enforcement as well as concealed weapon permit holders and certain level volunteers for schools. Sullivan predicted the database could hold the fingerprints of up to 30 percent of the population.

"Fingerprints are a tried and true method of identification," Sullivan said. "No one in the world has identical fingerprints, not even identical twins."

The Crime Scene House is part crime scene, part classroom. Two years ago, it was renovated and transformed into the cutting edge facility it is now. Half of it is a classroom and lab, while the other half is dressed out like the interior of a typical home; one where a crime was commit-

Other workshops for the camp included photography - teaching campers how to properly photograph a crime scene and recovery of human remains - using proper search and excavation techniques. For that part of the camp, students head off to the one of just seven body farms in the country. There they'll learn to take fingerprints, examine evidence and human decomposition, even use the department's forensics lab and see the late Charles "Bo" Harrison's vehicle frozen in time from his murder in 2003.
