

Bourbon & Brushes: The Sound of Bourbon Where Every Pour Tells a Story™

Welcome to Bourbon & Brushes: The Sound of Bourbon—a podcast where the crackle of a torch, the clink of a glass, and the hum of local stories come together in one beautifully crafted experience. This isn't just another whiskey podcast. It's a sensory road trip through America, told one custom smoked Old Fashioned at a time.

Each episode is a curated journey into the heart of a specific city or state. We dive deep into the roots of regional bourbons, visiting local distilleries that define their region's flavor, history, and pride. We interview bartenders, distillers, historians, artists, and everyday bourbon lovers, giving voice to the culture and character that influence the spirits we sip. But we don't stop at storytelling—we mix as we go.

Every featured drink is custom-built to reflect the flavors of the region. We craft simple syrups from local fruits, spices, herbs, and even vegetables, infusing every cocktail with a sense of place. Then, we smoke each Old Fashioned with wood chips sourced from trees native to the region—from cypress and oak to pecan and applewood—adding a bold aromatic layer that brings it all home.

It's where mixology meets geography—and you're invited to explore.

Whether you're a bourbon buff, a home bar hero, or just someone who appreciates a damn good drink with a good story, this show will stir your curiosity, ignite your taste buds, and leave you thirsty for more.

So grab your passport (and your rocks glass).

Tune in. Mix it up. Take the scenic route.
