SPRING FASHIONS from PARIS

THE sky's the limit for variation in the new clothes now on their way to you from Paris. Vivid pastel colors—intense tones from the South Seas—are so completely in command that not even classic black can be worn without a dash of brightness. Prints are exciting . . . hats are sensational . . . altogether, these styles, photographed in color by Scaioni, exclusively for The News, are an intoxicating Spring cocktail.

This exciting play suit from Marcel Rochas proves that shorts are growing longer. Made of striped pink flannel, shorts and jacket button on royal blue buttons that match the silk sports shirt, which fastens on pink buttons.

The spectator sports ensemble can be in any color you like this Spring so long as it's yellow. This Molyneux sports ensemble makes it Sutter's gold, as to the tweed jacket and dress, and the unlined plaid coat is crossbarred with gold. The hat brim is very important to chic in sports

Blue and white and red flower print silk, part of it mostly blue and part mostly red, makes a 4-star dress by Mainbocher. There's a long coat of the same, and gloves and flower bouquet all the same. The mannequin wears a wide hat of rough natural straw from Rose Valois.

Mainbocher, who is Mrs. Wallis Simpson's favorite dressmaker, combines tulip yellow with tulip green to make this stunning evening ensemble. The sleeveless swagger coat is made of yellow crepe, striped with diagonal gold bars (now we know where all those gold bars from the Bank of France got to). The dress has a sash and bodice harness of the gold that makes the wrep.

Behind the bars that make the Orient so bright is the proper place for ladies at night this season. Oriental striped gauze makes this magnificent Molyneux evening gown with the stripes running both ways—up and across. The belt is a chain such as French wine stewards wear, and the cloak, that has twenty yards of deep Gauguin red silk in it, flows in a widening mass from the shoulders.

A Crimeless America?

by THOMAS J. COURTNEY
State's Attorney of Cook County, Illinois

As prosecutor for the second largest metropolitan area in the United States, I have the unpleasant task of sending 7,000 persons to prison each year.

That might qualify me as a pessimist. Yet I don't agree with anyone who talks about America being in the last stages of degeneracy and lawlessness, with no outlook for the future. For our nation is definitely winning the war against gangdom and criminality. I thoroughly believe a crimeless America is coming.

By that I mean freedom from organized crime and sustained defiance of law. There will always be individual crimes of passion. But crime by armies of desperadoes is on its way out.

It has taken a long time to arouse this nation to a furious war on crime. Yet now it is crashing ahead with such relentlessness that victory is certain.

Definite results appear. Desperate, brazen gangs have been so thoroughly crushed there is scarcely a major outfit left operating. Ask those who survived police bullets what they think—Al Capone, "Machine Gun" Kelly and a host of their kind now at Alcatraz.

A bank robbery is getting to be a rare event. In some cities even arsonists, the most despicable and the hardest to convict of all criminals, have been run to cover. And kidnaping—well, the G-Men have attended to that.

Automobile stealing isn't the gold mine it used to be. Any city can be relatively free of car thefts. We went after motor car thieves in Chicago and the number stolen dropped from ninety-six cars daily to less than seven.

But even such concrete facts take secondary place to the public attitude toward crime. How long has it been since a gangster has been given a hero's funeral, with politicians in attendance, floral pieces piled high, and the $10,000 casket flaunted before the public? Sort of gone out of style, hasn't it?

Well, that means something. There is a different attitude toward crime. It isn't that it holds any less fascination, but the public wants its murder in the magazine and not on the front page.

Crime in real life is being robbed of its glamour. Strip away the decorations and it won't take the public long to smash the skeleton. Already Parent-Teacher Associations are waging war on toy pistols, and Minnesota has recently passed a law against them.

No longer do people believe crime can't be licked. Confidence is the forerunner of victory. And the smashing of gangs has created the will to win.

Of greatest import is the battle against poverty. There is a definite economic basis for most crime. Take away the profits and gangs go to pieces. Destroy slums and the worst breeding spots of crimes are eliminated.

Social agencies and clubs are on the move. Churches are getting at the roots of the problem. Millions of children, now underprivileged, are going to get their chance in the next few years. We are on the eve of our greatest era of social service, and this will surely bring a mighty victory over lawlessness.

Ignorance, superstition, disease, poverty and vice have steadily retreated whenever science, education and religion have united forces to give them battle. Now these agencies, backed by public opinion and aided by law enforcement bodies, are organized against crime. A virtually crime-free America is on its way.
