

‘You’ve Got Mail!’
(but don’t worry, you’re above the law)

Every person, that is exposed to Top Secret, Secret, Confidential, or any other classified material is required to read and sign a document, acknowledging and affirming that that they will diligently and faithfully safeguard the heavy responsibilities that they are being entrusted with. A duty not to be taken lightly, as lives could be at risk.

‘Loose lips sink ships!’

Divulging or merely mishandling classified documents or other sensitive materials can at most be a criminal offense, but as a minimum, will result in the revocation of the offender’s Top Secret clearance.

Hmmm...

Our former Secretary of State decided that it would be ‘OK’ to recklessly use an unsecured email server to conduct state business. Her defense was that nothing she posted was classified at the time she posted it. Maybe a little sensitive, but not classified. So far as has been reported, that is apparently true, but the powers that be have reconsidered some of the material she was so cavalier with and deemed it worthy of a security classification. And she promises she has turned over EVERYTHING. Right.

But don’t worry. Hillary Rodham Clinton, like her husband, Teflon (“Define, ‘it’.” “I did not have sex with that woman.”) Bill, is above the law. If any one of us had testified to Congress like those two, we would STILL be in jail.

Hillary knew that if her hubby could lie under oath before Congress and get away with it, then her ‘minor’ transgressions with her email would not be a problem. And her Presidential dreams would stay alive.

Well, her 'trustworthiness' ratings are down in the pits, and rightfully so. Incongruously, her poll numbers have risen dramatically, thanks partially to an opponent who proclaimed, stupidly and with a gun pointed at his own foot, "The American people are sick and tired of hearing about your damned emails!"

Well Bernie, since that statement, the American people, or at least the Democratic following you were hoping to inspire, seem sick and tired of hearing anything you have to say. So the Democrats are rallying behind an acknowledged, untrustworthy, establishment politician and the Republicans can't figure out who the hell they want to drive the boat.

Most likely, the original 'Birther' will soon inhabit the White House, Slick Willie will be wandering the halls once again trying to get as much of 'it' as he can with whomever he can, and the country will be that much closer to the anarchy the liberal left seems to crave.

The old Chinese blessing/curse/toast, 'May you live in interesting times' might soon be a reality, but not one we will be sipping mint juleps to.
