

And Gabriel Lifted His TRUMPet

There is a very interesting phenomenon occurring in American politics these days. And its name is Trump.

Love him or hate him, The Donald is a breath of fresh air into a system where, whether a fan of the red or the blue, there hasn't been a real choice for decades. And yet we peons of Animal Farm ilk remain convinced that we have some say in how our lives will be governed.

Hah!

So along comes Donald Trump to upset the apple cart. And make no mistake; the billionaire extraordinaire is beginning to spill more than a few bushels of apples. He has our overlords shaking in their boots because he just might be able to do something that they thought impossible. He doesn't need their money, so they cannot control him. Without the puppeteer's strings orchestrating his every move, he might be able to change the very nature of their hold on their American serfs.

The powers that be are pulling out all the stops to halt the growing Trump tsunami. Both the Clinton News Network and the fairly balanced Fake News Network are doing everything they can to derail the juggernaut, to the point of risking their supposed objectivity. Not that the major network's reporters ever were truly objective, their 'facts' always tilted to fit their presumed employer's political leanings. But this is historic, and almost comical, watching those competing networks now suddenly in lockstep, falling all over themselves trying to condemn Trump.

The two major 'competing' political parties are doing the same. But like their real masters, they are running the risk that the uneducated masses will finally figure out that the game is totally rigged. Do the ruling class, their puppet political parties, and their network mouthpieces actually believe that we will be duped into believing that their desperate efforts to derail the billionaire are in our best interests? Interesting times, indeed. We just might be on the precipice of monumental change, and if we can manage to make it bloodless, what a great coup that will be.

Unfortunately, history has shown time and again that such a shift in the political winds is rarely accomplished without great loss. Hopefully, this time will be different. But I doubt it. Just as importantly, the rest of the world needs to remain calm during this upheaval. Opportunists do not need to interfere with the status quo while the American Dream is redefined.

Else Gabriel will be blowing his horn regardless of who emerges triumphant in this political farce. And whoever emerges to lead the United States will have his hands full.