

Racists Beware!

This morning when you got up out of bed and took a look in the mirror, you saw one. One what? A racist! What? No way!

Well, yes you did, and so did I. It is only natural for every one of us to favor others among us that look generally like we do, have the same ethnic background, and share the same heritage. Whites identify with whites, blacks with blacks, Orientals with Orientals, etc. So, to some extent, we are all racists at heart.

The big question, is whether or not it is wrong to be a racist.

Shouldn't the citizens of a country, like the UK, be concerned that their national identity is being eroded by the peaceful invasion of thousands of immigrants from beyond their shores. Isn't it morally sound for most Europeans to be alarmed by the spread of Islam throughout every aspect of their society. Can't the people of the US be troubled by the thousands of illegal immigrants that storm across our borders every year.

Of course, here in the US, you can't blame our politicians for allowing policies that make this invasion possible. They just don't want to alienate the Hispanic population already here, and thus doom their party to certain defeat in any upcoming elections. Funny how a small minority can dictate the direction a country takes. How did that come about? Take a look at the last two presidential elections and you will see that 90% of black voters voted for the black candidate. Was there an outcry of racism? Nope. Was it racist? Yes. Was it wrong? Nope.

Would there have been an outcry if over 90% of the white voters had voted for the white candidate? You better believe it! That would have been politically incorrect behavior.

The majority is not allowed to use its political muscle to promote its agenda. I wonder, once whites are no longer the majority in the US, will they be granted the privileges and concessions currently offered minorities here. I doubt it.

Of course, I will immediately be labeled a racist for saying such things. I'm of Irish heritage, so I'm one of those privileged, evil white bastards that has brought this fine country to the brink of disaster. Of course, my ancestral immigrants to the US were not looked on so favorably when they arrived, either. Who am I to complain? Maybe we shouldn't be alarmed at the quickening change in the character, hell, the very soul of our country. After all, it turned out for the best in the past, despite the influence of those pesky Irishmen, swarthy Italians, overbearing Germans, and every other immigrant group that came to our shores and made this grand experiment work.

That miss-mash of cultures made the US the envy of the world. And unless you have traveled the world, you don't realize how much we are envied, and even hated. Yet they all want what we have.

But nowadays the peoples of the world, the folks that have come illegally to our country, and even our own weak leaders, don't want to maintain the high standards that made us enviable. No, they want to level the playing field, be politically correct and bring the US down to the level of the rest of the world.

That is where we are heading. And once we get there, I have to say that we Americans are not going to like it one bit.

So let me be politically incorrect. I'm an American. I want America to be the envy of the world. So let's stop diluting our culture with groups that, unlike all those in the past, refuse to assimilate into the fabric of our country, or want a free ticket based on the wrongs of the past. Future immigrants need come here legally. Illegals should all be deported. The legal entrants should be encouraged to keep their heritage, language, and culture, but should be required to learn English, get a job, learn our history, and become Americans. Completely.

I think it is okay for all of us to be a little racist.

Captain Steve