CASE STUDY OF RELEVANCE

1. Shah Bano Case (Mohd. Ahmed Khan v. Shah Bano Begum, 1985)

The Shah Bano case is a cornerstone in Indian legal history concerning the rights of divorced Muslim women. Shah Bano, a 62-year-old woman, sought maintenance under Section 125 of the Criminal Procedure Code (CrPC) after being divorced by her husband through triple talaq.

- The Supreme Court held that a divorced Muslim woman was entitled to maintenance beyond the iddat period.
- It highlighted the need for a uniform civil code, sparking debates on personal laws versus secular laws.

2. Navin Kohli v. Neelu Kohli (2006)

This case is known for its observations on irretrievable breakdown of marriage as a ground for divorce. The husband sought divorce, alleging cruelty by the wife.

- The Supreme Court recommended irretrievable breakdown of marriage as a valid ground for divorce.
- The judgment paved the way for future discussions on adding this ground to Indian divorce laws.

3. Saroj Rani v. Sudarshan Kumar Chadha (1984)

This case dealt with Section 9 of the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955, which provides for restitution of conjugal rights.

- The Supreme Court upheld the constitutional validity of Section 9, emphasizing that the provision aimed to preserve the marriage.
- However, the judgment has also been critiqued for prioritizing marital unity over individual autonomy.

4. K. Srinivas Rao v. D.A. Deepa (2013)

This case set an important precedent regarding cruelty as a ground for divorce. The wife filed false criminal complaints against the husband and his family, leading to their harassment.

- The Supreme Court held that filing false cases constitutes mental cruelty, sufficient for granting divorce.
- It underscored the misuse of legal provisions and the need for judicial intervention in such matters.

5. Danial Latifi v. Union of India (2001)

This case is critical in understanding the rights of Muslim women post-divorce under the Muslim Women (Protection of Rights on Divorce) Act, 1986.

- The Supreme Court clarified that a Muslim husband must make reasonable provision for the wife's maintenance beyond the iddat period.
- It upheld the constitutional validity of the 1986 Act while ensuring justice for divorced Muslim women.

6. Mayadevi v. Jagdish Prasad (2007)

This judgment elaborates on what constitutes mental cruelty under the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955.

- The Supreme Court noted that persistent accusations, baseless allegations, and abnormal behavior could amount to mental cruelty.
- It provided clarity on assessing cruelty in divorce cases.

7. Joseph Shine v. Union of India (2018)

Though primarily dealing with adultery under Section 497 of the Indian Penal Code, this judgment indirectly influenced divorce law.

- The Supreme Court decriminalized adultery, stating that it could still be a ground for divorce but not a criminal offense.
- It marked a progressive step in recognizing individual freedoms within marriage.

8. Amardeep Singh v. Harveen Kaur (2017)

This case addressed the cooling-off period under Section 13B(2) of the Hindu Marriage Act for mutual consent divorces.

- The Supreme Court held that the six-month cooling-off period is not mandatory and can be waived in certain cases.
- This judgment expedited the divorce process in mutual consent cases, reducing unnecessary delays.

9. Lata Singh v. State of Uttar Pradesh (2006)

Though not directly related to divorce, this case addressed the rights of inter-caste and inter-religious couples, influencing societal perceptions of marriage and divorce.

- The Supreme Court upheld the right of adult individuals to marry persons of their choice.
- It strengthened the idea of individual autonomy in marital decisions.

10. Narendra v. K. Meena (2016)

This judgment further clarified what constitutes cruelty as a ground for divorce. The wife refused to live with the husband and repeatedly threatened him with suicide.

- The Supreme Court ruled that such behavior amounts to cruelty, justifying divorce.
- It highlighted the impact of psychological harassment on marital relationships.
