"Lord Remember me...into your Kingdom."

The solemnity of Christ the King closes the liturgical year that began with Advent. The gospel passage presents us with the scene of Christ's agony on the Cross, amid derision on the part of the bystanders and with the inscription declaring him ironically as King of the Jews.

Christ's Kingdom is mysterious and hidden in the scene. The presents Jesus' royalty in asurprising way, "The Christ of God, the Chosen One, the King" appears without power orglory; he is on the Cross, where he seems more conquered than conqueror. For the grandeur of his kingdom is not power as defined by this world, but the love of God, a love capable of encountering and healing all things. Christ lowered himself to us out of this love. He lived our human misery and suffered to the lowest point of our human condition: injustice, betrayal, abandonment to embrace and save every living being.

In our gospel passage the emphasis is on the merciful love Jesus during his passion; a love capable of bearing everything to save us. This is seen the salvation of the good thief. He exhibits the virtues needed to receive a place in God's kingdom. He had faith, because he believed that he would reign with God, whom he saw dying at his side; he had hope, because he asked to enter into his kingdom; and he had charity, because he severely reproached his fellow thief, who was dying at the same time as he, and the same crime. The man suffered the same torments as Jesus. But instead of joining in the mockery of the others and reproaching him for his apparent passivity before injustice, he recognizes in the Nazarene, his companion in suffering, the Son of God.

The fear of God moves the good thief to acknowledge and confess his guilt. Thus, he advances, through contrition, from fear to love: "remember me when you come into your kingdom" The good thief receives not only God's forgiveness but also the promise of Paradise. "Truly, I say to you, today you will be with me in Paradise." For the believer life consists in dwelling with Christ, and where Christ is there is his Kingdom.

God bless you all. Fr. Henry
