ing it on her back to safety. The tale is one of both faith and courage — qualities that Lisenbie said her mother possessed in abundance.

"God, when we are going through the struggles and difficult times, is carrying us," Lisenbie said.

The paintings follow an imaginary boat ride around Sanibel in which Dolly Ireland, a woman known for her hospitality and love of children, takes a group of youngsters out for a day on the water and a picnic at the light-house. The boat, named "On Eagles Wings," refers to the Biblical text of Isaiah 40:31, which reads, "Yet those who wait on the Lord will gain new strength; they will mount with wings like eagles, they will run and not get tired, they will walk and not become weary." The boat's signal flags spell out "courage," "hope" and "love," in the hope that the story will inspire families who are on a journey of recovery.

The paintings are filled with images of Sanibel, including wildlife, favorite landmarks, and its people. Gramma Dot can be found walking along the beach, and Mrs. Willie Glass, a family friend of the Irelands, is waving from her front porch. There are the old Snook Apartments, which the Irelands bought in the 1960s when they first moved to Sanibel, as well as the old Bailey's General Store, the Island Inn and other acknowledgements to the people and businesses that made contributions to the oncology center. The paintings are filled with these kinds of allusions to Sanibel's past, and residents can have a lot of fun picking them out. Janku spent hours poring over images of old Sanibel to capture the feel of the island as it was years ago.

"I went to the library and checked out all the books," she said.

Eight smaller "porthole" paintings expand on the theme of the boat ride around the island. One depicts a boy leaning on the rail, squinting in the sunshine, hair blowing in the breeze, and wearing a broad smile. Another is an underwater scene with turtles and dolphins, in which the propeller is the only visible part of the boat. Sometimes it is seen from a distance through mangrove roots and a flock of roseate spoonbills.

Part of the fun is in looking at the paintings and figuring out where the boat is and where it's headed next.

"We've been working on this for two years. To me, this day is very exciting," Lisenbie said. "We hope it's an offering of encouragement to the children and families who come to this unit."
