ISSA-USA’s mission is to provide training about Islamic beliefs and values so that social service and mental health providers can take them into consideration while providing care for the Muslim community. Despite the mental health stigma, a group of social service providers were determined to bring attention to the mental health and social welfare issues that were impacting Muslims everyday. They believed ISSA-USA could be the link between social issues and Islam.

MISSION
ISSA-USA’s mission is to provide training about Islamic beliefs and values so that social service and mental health providers can take them into consideration while providing care for the Muslim community. We also aim to educate Muslim community leaders on establishing social and mental health services in their communities.

VISION
Through our education, training, technical assistance, research, mentorship and collaboration, we anticipate an intercultural competent social service network. A network that ensures Muslims a high quality of life.
What We Do

OUR APPROACH
ISSA-USA provides training and capacity building resources to develop cross-cultural awareness among Muslims.

OUR OBJECTIVES
STUDY: Provide support, technical assistance and leadership in the study of human service issues American Muslims face.
ADVOCATE: Educate and train providers about best practices considering Islamic beliefs and traditions.
NETWORK: Develop opportunities for mainstream providers and Muslim community leaders to network, build partnerships, and address the needs facing their local communities.
RAISE AWARENESS: Educate Muslims about social services, mental health, family and marriage, behavioral health concerns, and the professions that address them.

Current Programs
