The Mother Of Mother's Day

The idea of a day dedicated to mothers in America was first proposed by Anna Jarvis in 1908, a year after her mother's death. She wanted to honor her mother's lifelong devotion to caring for the sick and promoting peace. Anna organized the first Mother's Day celebration at a Methodist church in West Virginia, where her mother had taught Sunday school.

Mother's Day gained popularity quickly, and by 1914, it became a national holiday in the United States. The US Congress passed a resolution designating the second Sunday in May as Mother's Day, and it was signed into law by President Woodrow Wilson.

Today, Mother's Day is celebrated in many countries around the world, although the date and traditions vary. In most countries, it is celebrated on the second Sunday in May. In some countries, it is a public holiday, while in others, it is a more personal celebration. Regardless of the location, Mother's Day remains a day to honor and appreciate the important role of mothers in our lives.

This Day in History

Mr. Potato Head is a classic toy that was first introduced on May 1st, 1952, by Hasbro. It was the first toy to be advertised on television and was originally intended to be used with real potatoes.

The kit came with plastic parts such as eyes, noses, and mouths that could be stuck into a potato to create a face. In 1964, Hasbro began including a plastic potato body with the kit, which eliminated the need for a real potato. Over the years, Mr. Potato Head has become a beloved children's toy and has even appeared in movies and TV shows.

The New Cell Tower: Hidden in Plain Sight

Redmond Way & 520

The concept of disguising cell phone towers as trees dates back to the late 1980s, when the first "monopalm" was installed in California. The idea behind this innovative design was to mitigate the visual impact of the towers on the surrounding landscape by blending them with the natural environment. Over time, the design has evolved, and now there are various types of disguised cell phone towers, including monopines, flagpoles, and cacti.

The practice has become widespread in recent years, especially in urban areas, where zoning laws and community opposition often require cell towers to be concealed.
