

Biography: Holly Corbett

Holly Corbett is currently the Director of Content at a DEI nonprofit, Consciously Unbiased. In her current role, she hosts and executive produces the “Breaking the Bias” podcast and oversees content creation from marketing materials to website copy to creative campaigns. Corbett began her work at Consciously Unbiased when the nonprofit was just a startup, and with her help, they have tripled revenue in just three years.

Corbett's goal is to build passionate communities and transform workplace cultures through stories that ignite inclusion. Corbett is an explorer, whether that be of ideas, places or stories.

Prior to her work at Consciously Unbiased, Corbett was the Head Content Creator at The Female Quotient. She spearheaded the overall branding strategy and increased web traffic by 200% in a year. She also was a reporter for 15 years working with multiple publications like USA Today, Woman’s Day, SELF, Forbes.com and many others. She also is the co-founder of The Lost Girls, LLC, which was a yearlong, round-the-world trip with two other media professionals where they blogged their experiences on LostGirlsWorld.com. The blog obtained 50,000 unique monthly visitors and resulted in her co-authoring a travel memoir entitled “The Lost Girls”.

Corbett is a graduate of Syracuse University with a master’s degree in journalism. For her undergraduate education, she attended the State University of New York at Geneseo and obtained a Bachelor of Arts degree in communications with a specialization in journalism/mass media.

She currently resides in Syracuse, New York with her husband and her two young children. Prior to motherhood, Corbett enjoyed traveling and went to all seven continents before she was 30. She has completed multiple triathlons and marathons. Today, Corbett is interested in learning about human design and the anatomy of energy healing.