By Don Evans Thomas II

Who I Am

My name is Don Evans Thomas II. I am a son, a veteran, a builder, and above all, a believer in what's possible with God. I served this country in Operation Enduring Freedom, and I returned home carrying the realities of that service: anxiety, insomnia, depression, tinnitus, knee injuries, and sleep apnea. On paper, I am an 80% disabled Army veteran. In practice, I am someone who gets up every day and keeps walking. That is what defines me. My family journey also shaped my path. I met my biological mother at twenty-five years old. Five years later, I was the one responsible for her cremation, closure, and final rites. My father stood with me in that moment, and I honor him for it. But the legacy I am building — the companies, the vision, the governance — has been my assignment since high school. I don't build from a corner office downtown. I build from my home, in the same neighborhoods many call "the hood." This is where I pray, where I grind, and where I prove that discipline and faith can turn visions into documents, sweat into equity, and persistence into progress. My walk is my proof.

The Impossible Made Possible

Thirty days. That's all it took to accomplish what most people would call impossible. In one month, we documented over $1 million worth of sweat equity, established corporate agreements, built financial ledgers, created governance systems, and designed the foundations of two entities: Convenient 4U Inc. (S-Corp) and Wise Guise Entertainment (Sole Proprietorship). I didn't have investors or a safety net. I had grit, prayer, and discipline. For years, I balanced twelve-hour delivery shifts with six hours of research and development, compliance study, and vision building. While many of my peers pursued likes or recognition, I chose sacrifice and structure. The result? A system of governance and accountability that rivals established corporations — but built from the ground up, with faith as the cornerstone. This is not about being "better than" anyone. This is about refusing to quit. It's about showing the next generation — especially those who feel overlooked, doubted, or dismissed — that their walk matters. Their sacrifice matters. Their faith matters. All things are possible with God. Impossible is just a word.

Closing Note

I share this story because I believe the world needs living examples of what faith, discipline, and vision can accomplish. My mission is not just to grow companies, but to inspire communities and future leaders. The foundation has been laid. The next chapter is about scaling this vision — together.

Respectfully,

Don Evans Thomas II
