I first came to know Don Azcona in 2004 when he applied for the position of Operations Manager for Land-Sea Power Ltd. I was planning for my retirement and I began to interview candidates for my replacement.

Don met or exceeded all the criteria. He was quick to grasp concepts, easily began to incorporate his own methods into our routines and did not hesitate to ask why a procedure was done in a certain way. He soon became an asset and one of the team.

He absorbed a tremendous amount of knowledge and material in a very short time in a field in which he had had no previous experience. He was able to take control of situations, analyze problems and direct people to the satisfaction of all concerned.

After a few short months I felt confident enough in Don that I could move into retirement with the knowledge that I had left the company in very capable hands.

If I were ever again in a position to rehire Don I would not hesitate to do so,
