13	2 - Circa 1740 Italian Carved Architectural Friezes After The Cantoria By Luca della Robbia - Carved of wood each frieze is 23.5" tall x 24" wide, by unknown artist craftsman - 1 of Singing and Dancing Children and the other Dancing Children Playing Symbols - family lore states "These panels were purchased by William Meissner, A Graduate of MIT and an Architect by profession. Mr. Miessner aquired them in 1940 from a 2nd Ave antique shop in New York City. At that time they were 200 years old. Originally they were door panels to a music room in a palace in Milan, Italy. They are exact replicas of Panels from the Cantoria By Luca della Robbia" This was his first documented commission, the Cantoria ("Singing Gallery"; 1431–1438) for the organ loft of Cathedral of Florence. During the seven years it took della Robbia to carve the reliefs under the supervision of Brunelleschi, his style developed. While the earliest carved panels are fairly symmetric and lack movement, in later panels the movement of the singers becomes much more evident and dynamic. The Singing Gallery shows children singing, dancing, and making music to "praise the Lord" in the words of Psalm 150. Their figures are at once lively, finely observed, and gracefully combined in groups designed to fit the ten panels of the gallery. The advanced nature of the work has been seen to establish Luca della Robbia's skill in stone as well as secure his place as a major Florentine artist and student of Renaissance naturalism. Panel boards are secured together on back by expertly matched butterfly wedges (one panel firm and secure, one panel's wedges are a little bit loose but still hold together well) ({local pick up or buyer arranges 3rd party packing and shipping})

15	Signed & Dated 1974 Spiritualist Watercolor / Gouache by Agatha Wojciechowski - Mediumistic artist Agatha Wojciechowski attributed her art making to unseen forces beyond herself, transferring credit to guiding ethereal forces. She established herself as a spiritualist medium and healer in New York and was both a respected teacher of psychic development and a famous healer who traveled around the world. Under a light trance, Wojciechowski created automatic writings and paintings, a process where she cleared her mind and freed her hands to follow celestial instructions. Her swirling watercolors form landscape like abstractions or reveal colorful faces, each work acts as a glimpse into another world or unknown consciousness. Entirely self taught, Wojciechowski believed that spirits were controlling her hands as she created in a trance like state. This 16" x 13.5" sight watercolor signed lower right, suggests an ethereal forested landscape populated by amorphous faces looking back at us. Mounted in 25" x 22.5" frame

Yngve Edward Soderberg (1896 - 1971) Water Color On Paper "Sailboat Racing" - 13 1/2" X 18 1/4" sight, framed and matted 20 1/2 X 25 1/2, Soderberg was an American artist whose career was centered on Mystic, Connecticut. He is credited with being a painter, etcher, writer, teacher, designer, and lithographer. He is best known for his etchings, America's Cup paintings, and maritime watercolors. Soderberg was born in Chicago, Illinois to Swedish immigrants Berlin and Gust Soderberg. He was one of three children born. By age of twelve, Soderberg had already shown interest in drawing. He studied at the School of the Art Institute of Chicago and the Art Students League of New York. With a scholarship from the Art Institute of Chicago, he headed west for a summer of vagabonding in Yellowstone and British Columbia. In British Columbia, he sailed with fisherman, sailing small boats, building his own boats, and sailing in the big wind ships. His year at the Art Student's League in New York brought him the Kendall prize. In Chicago, Soderberg made money for his school and living expenses through architectural drawings and other forms of commercial art. He illustrated for articles in the Chicago Tribune and New York Herald-Tribune. When formal schooling was over, He traveled to Paris, Corsica, Normandy, and Brittany, and ultimately to Sweden with his sister. Upon returning from Europe, he headed to Mason's Island, off Mystic, Connecticut to spend the summer painting. It was a major turning point as it was here that he was to find the field art and sense of place which made him unique, for that time, among etchers. He ultimately built a cabin there with steam heat and a north-lighted studio.[Previously, no one had made etchings of small sailboats. But Mason's Island proved to be a perfect subjects for his etchings. His front yard was full of boats. At first he focused on etchings, but later concentrated on watercolors. By 1930, Soderberg was painting America's Cup Defenders. His watercolors were regularly used for magazines including The Sportsman, Yachting, Town and Country, and The Spur. His watercolors graced the cover of The Sportsman Magazine four times including July 1933, May 1934, August 1934, and February 1935. He painted every America's Cup Race from 1930 and in 1937 sailed on the Endeavor II. In 1934 he married Nancy Horn, a summer resident of Mason's Island from Paterson, New Jersey, and an accomplished sailor. During the Depression years, he became a Works Progress Administration artist. His WPA mural, Canal Era, painted in 1939, is located in the Morrisville, Pennsylvania Post Office. He worked for the Electric Boat Company during WWII where he painted morale posters for shipyard workers. Some posters were as large as eighteen feet high and depicted the cycle of events in building a submarine. While staying in Hyannisport, Massachusetts with a friend, he made a watercolor of a Wyanno Class boat with the number 94 on her and the name Victura on the stern. She was being sailed by John F. Kennedy. The future President bought the painting. "The picture is extremely good," John F. Kennedy wrote. {local pick up or buyer arranges 3rd party packing and shipping}

84	Juan Ricardo Original Mixed Media On Paper "Portrait" Framed By Randell Voelker - Juan Ricardo (American, 20th Century) 11" X 8 1/2" Oil and charcoal on masonite, signed lower right, Randall Voelker Framer, Randall was an artist that happened to be a framer. By trade, he was a carpenter in the Chicago land area. Back in the early 1970's, Randall decided to become an entrepreneur and start creating custom frames. He was a unique artist that would scour the Chicago area for particular timber from demolished buildings, farmhouses, and lumber yard (peculiar) wood. He collected this wood and would repurpose it into these one-of-a-kind frames you see today. He milled down each piece to make the frames. In addition to this, he created all the other mediums that became part of the finished work: metal wrappings, inlaid woods, and hand painted matting. Randall never knew how he was going to frame a piece of work until he took it to his studio and "became inspired." His great attention to detail, as well as incorporating a feeling into each piece he framed, is what made the finished frame a piece of artwork all by itself That is why the customer almost never was allowed to give him directions or ideas.... You just left your art work and had to wait for his creation. This was the most exciting element of picking up your finished frame. It was always exhilarating to see what Randall created. {local pickup or in house shipping available}

The print measure approx. 17 5/8" x11 5/8" - Nisaburo Ito (1910-1988) was a student of Tsuchida Bakusen at The Kyoto City Specialty School of Painting. Ito was interested in promoting the art of the woodblock print and interpreting traditional woodblock images in a 20th century style. His beautiful landscapes and nature subjects captured the attention of those looking to preserve the memory of the classic architecture and natural scenes which were quickly changing in the mid-20th century. His works are tranquil reminders of the traditional beauty of Japan. His floral subjects are beautiful, large woodblock prints, rendered with lovely attention to detail and lively color. He was well known for local scenes in Kyoto - among them a very popular image of the Golden Pavilion in Kyoto. - local pick up or in house shipping loose and rolled in tube available

297	Monumental Chinese Black Stone Carving of God of Fortune "Trieu Cong Minh" - 33" Tall, 43" Wide, 16" Deep. Many Chinese believe that the background is Mr. Loc Trieu Cong Minh, who served as a marshal under the Shang Dynasty. Trieu Cong Minh increased Tru Vuong against Zhou Yu Vuong, but was defeated and died. In his famous work Phong Than Expression, Trieu Cong Minh is a talented man who rides a black tiger. Trieu Cong Minh often disguises himself as a beggar, going to the homes of the rich and asking for excess rice, soup and clothes. But he did not ask for food for himself, but used it to give to the poor. After Trieu Cong Minh was destroyed by Khuong Tu Nha, he was enthroned and became Mr. Loc or the god of wealth.
