Original Black Metal Frame, Under Glass, 40 1/2" X 35 5/8", Publisher Chromacomp NYC By Chalk & Vermillion NYC. 1983 HC 16/30 Erté—a pseudonym for Romain de Tirtoff—was an influential 20th-century artist whose sleek aesthetic permeated the realms of 20th-century fashion, art, theatre, film, and interior design. Widely celebrated as the "Father of Art Deco," Erté created glamorous illustrations that reflected a modern luxury and prosperity emphasized by clean lines and geometric patterns found in classical Greek pottery and Japanese woodblock prints. Born in Russia, Erté got his start as a costume designer in the workshop of famed Parisian couturier Paul Poiret, where he would dress dancers and film stars like Josephine Baker and Joan Crawford and design stage sets for Broadway productions and Hollywood films. Also a professional illustrator, Erté designed over 200 covers for Harper's Bazaar magazine. His paintings and drawings are held in the collections of renowned institutions like the Victoria and Albert Museum, the Metropolitan Museum of Art, and the Smithsonian Institution. Erté's alias comes from the French pronunciation of his initials, R and T.

Known for: Marine painting-sailing ships, illustration. Robert Weir, Jr. (1836-1905) earned his living in the various careers of seaman, naval officer, engineer and freelance artist. The Robert Weir Papers, along with Weir's log of the Clara Bell, reflect another of Weir's endeavors: writing. Born at West Point, New York in 1836 to Robert W. Weir, an accomplished professional painter and a professor of drawing at West Point, Robert Jr. spent little time at home. At the age of fifteen, Weir ran away to sea. He continued sailing for the next fourteen years. Assuming the pseudonym Robert Wallace, Weir sailed aboard the bark Clara Bell in 1855. Upon the death of William C. Johnson, Weir was promoted to his position as boatsteerer. Recording daily events aboard ship, Robert Weir wrote a journal, which vividly related the whale man's life, both in prose and in illustrations (This log, now preserved at the Mystic Seaport Museum, is cataloged as Log 164. Several of Weir's drawings illustrate the novel: Whale Hunt: The Narrative of a Voyage by Nelson Cole Haley, Harpooner in the Ship Charles W. Morgan.) He eventually returned to New England in 1861. Weir's last whaling cruise aboard the schooner Palmyra ended in 1862 whereupon Weir enlisted in the Union Navy. Weir's naval experiences as Third Assistant Engineer aboard the USS Richmond, provide the background for two of the "Remembrances" included in this collection. After the Civil War, Weir continued to supply illustrations to Harper's Weekly, a practice he began in the service. He also illustrated an edition of the novel Hans Brinker and the Silver Skates and at least once exhibited at the National Academy of Design.

394	Used Invicta Reserve Tourbillon Model Red Gold #1574 Limited Edition 186/200 - {local pickup or in house shipping available}. Working sold as is no warranty expressed or implied. This fine timepiece with an exceptional design is made in a limited edition, in three existing dial colors. Each of the models is made in only 200 pieces, which makes them even more rare and exclusive. The product is a part of the Reserve collection. Its mechanism is set in a quite chunky circular stainless steel case. The robust, yet very complex casing includes the diameter of 52 mm and the thickness of 21 mm, so it is fair to say that this would not be a timepiece for people who prefer a discrete timekeeping instrument. Since it represents a breakthrough and a landmark in the history of the manufacturer, this large size that draws attention comes as no surprise. The case is the setting for the Seagull TY800 mechanical automatic movement with a visible flying tourbillon. The mechanism with 27 jewels runs on 21,600 vph with the power reserve of approximately 40 hours. The Seagull TY800 mechanism with a Cote de Genève decoration is visible through the exhibition case back. The case consists of more than four dozen parts. All the effort that was put in the construction is clearly visible in the appearance of the fixed bezel. The timepiece also has a screw down crown. The sophisticated design that we already underlined can be seen when you look at the dial of the watch that is guarded with the flame fusion crystal. In the background, there is a perlage motif plate which is the home of a spider shape decoration. The body of the spider is represented by the tourbillon cage, while the metal details represent the legs of the spider. Tourbillon cage completes a single rotation every minute and it is used to display seconds. The tips of the hour and minute hands are luminous. Due to the construction of the watch, it is able to withstand water pressures up to 500 meters. The timepiece for men is made with a chunky steel 7' bracelet with extra links, constructed to be appropriate for the large case. It is 31 mm wide and fastens with a deployment clasp.

591	Ernest Ruckle Watercolor 1970 Sci Fi Woman & Pet and John Long LE Print C-3PO Gives CPR to R2-D2 - Original Watercolor By Ernest Ruckle (1940-2018) of Sci Fi/futuristic "Woman With Pet"- Ruckle attended elementary schools in Florida and Georgia, and high school in New Jersey. At Rutgers University, he at first majored in biology, but later switched to English literature and specialized in literary criticism. His most influential teachers were Francis Fergusson and Paul Fussell. After getting his degree, he became a professional artist in 1963. He soon started to produce paintings in formal perspective with huge crowds of people and parodies of complex machinery. His first one-man show was at the Studio Gallery Workshop in New York City in 1966. (His tenth New York one-man show was in 2005 at the Louis K. Meisel Gallery.) Between 1966 and 1969 Ruckle developed an original flat style, influenced by Cubism and Futurism, with an unusual perspective system, perhaps influenced by Persian miniatures. Beginning around 1975 he began to use more than one style in a work and to use variation in style as a structural device.(matted under glass in 10" x 8" frame, signed E Ruckle 1970 bottom right) and print "C3PO gives CPR to R2D2" pencil signed by John Long 28/75 (matted, under glass in 10 1/2" x 9 1/2" frame)
