Jay is a full blooded Native American Indian. She was born into the Acoma Pueblo in 1959. She was inspired to continue the long lived tradition of working with pottery by observing her grandmother, Lita Garcia, at a very young age. She comes from a family of talented and creative pottery makers and painters. The lucrative aspect was also inspiration for Jay to become an artist. Jay is a natural gifted painter and with this in her blood she began painting many patterns at the age of 18. Jay specializes in hand painting ceramic pottery. She hand paints eye dazzling starburst and fine line patterns on wedding vases and other shapes of pottery. Jay was taught the traditional methods of hand coiling pottery using ancient traditional methods from her family members. However, she really enjoys the hand painting side of working with the pottery. She signs her pottery as Jay Vallo, Acoma. Jay is related to the following artists: Brian Chino (brother), Corrine Chino (sister), Germaine Reed (sister), and Edna Chino (mother).

330	Zeno Giglietti Mid Century Modern MCM Italian Art Monotype 198/275 - 1960s MCM Lithograph on paper signed lower right numbered lower left. Zeno Giglietti was born in 1918 and was largely influenced by the 1930s growing up. During the 1930s, many political ideologies such as Marxist Socialism, Capitalist Democracy, and the Totalitarianism of both Communism and Fascism were engaged in struggles for dominance, and epitomized the political atmosphere of the period. In Europe, Surrealism continued to be prominent, and had grown to have influence worldwide. Leading artists took the ideas posed by Surrealism and incorporated them into their pioneering political philosophies, creating a new kind of magic realism. This was exemplified in the work of artists such as Frida Kahlo and Diego Riviera in Mexico {local pick up or in house shipping available}

Seener Budgie Models, 1- Ford Mustang round patch, Lot Of 20+ Disabled American Veterans Postage Guaranteed Mini License Tags, In 1941, the Disabled American Veterans — a government-created group that provides services for military veterans with disabilities and their families — saw an opportunity to raise money for veterans during wartime. According to historians' accounts and hobbyist records, the DAV purchased the Idento Tag company and began proactively manufacturing and mailing these metal tags out to the owners of registered vehicles, using the exact license plate number as it was listed in the state's vehicle registration database (through each bureau's cooperation). Upon receiving the tag, the person would be asked for a donation to the Disabled American Veterans in exchange for the gift. When the vehicle owner would lose their keys with this identification tag on them, a stranger would (ideally) drop the keys in a mailbox, where the U.S. Post Office would deliver them to the DAV's Cincinnati address. The DAV would then return the keys to the registered owner of the vehicle, hoping that the deed would encourage the person to donate again out of appreciation and request another tag in the future when they updated their plates. Over the years, the tags evolved from stamped, painted metal to printed stickers on metal frames to paper prints in plastic sleeves — until eventually being discontinued. {local pick up or in house shipping available}

Castel, 1 - "Tablets Of The Law" Framed 34" X 26' Unframed 28" X 20" pencil titled and numbered, signed Castel In black marker or part of plate. In 1947, Castel helped to found the "New Horizons" (Ofakim Hadashim) group together with Yosef Zaritsky, Yehezkel Streichman, Marcel Janco and others. In 1959, he purchased a studio in Montparnasse where he worked for several months a year. In 1955, a solo exhibition of his works was mounted at the Tel Aviv Museum of Art. His murals hang in the Knesset, Binyanei HaUma Convention Center, Rockefeller Center in New York, and the official residence of the President of Israel in Jerusalem. In the 1930s and 1940s, many of Castel's paintings depicted the lives of Sephardic Jews in the Holy Land, revealing the influence of Persian miniatures.[3] From the 1950s on, Castel created relief paintings inspired by the "ancient predecessors of Hebrew civilization." In 1948, he visited the ruins of an ancient synagogue in Korazin, an ancient Jewish town in the Galilee.[4] Inspired by the basalt blocks he saw there, engraved with images and ornaments, he began to use ground basalt, which he molded into shapes, as his basic material.[5] The technique utilized ground basalt rock mixed with sand and glue, infused with the rich colors that became his trademark.[3] The works were embellished with archaic forms derived from ancient script, symbolism and mythological signs from Hebrew and Sumerian culture.[5] As a member of the New Horizons group, he combined elements of abstract European art with Eastern motifs and "Canaanite art. {local pickup or buyer arranges 3rd party packing and shipping}

After graduating high school he studied art at the Carnegie Technical Institute with Arthur Watson Sparks and George Sotter, then later with William Auerbach-Levy at the National Academy of Design. He also studied art in Paris and Florence. Shulgold began his career finding opportunities wherever he could: as a Carnegie student, he was awarded a prize for war poster design; in 1922, he created stage sets for a production of Booth Tarkington's Penrod at the Irene Kaufmann Settlement theater. Shulgold continued to teach students at the Settlement art school for several years. Meanwhile his paintings were exhibited at the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts, the Carnegie Museum of Art, and the Corcoran Gallery. In 1928 Shulgold moved to New York, although he retained close ties to Pittsburgh. By the 1930s he was becoming known as a portrait painter, albeit with his own specific views: "One may consider heads as a study in architecture. The shape is comparable to the structural design of a building. The features of a face are like the windows and ornamentation of the building" (Naylor). In 1943 Shulgold moved to California, where he was in demand as a portrait painter... for example, of Ronald Coleman playing the film role of Richard III in A Double Life—while continuing his work in other genres. One review of a 1951 show said that "In California he has turned to gayer moods and smaller sizes in pictures of flowers, nudes, and small portraits
