Camelot Properties Offers Boutique Property Management Brokerage Services in San Antonio
Company owner Jessica Alaine makes buying, selling, and rental of properties easier for people who want to be part of the booming real estate business

Rental home maintenance can be costly but the right property management company can make it easy. Camelot Properties, a boutique brokerage in San Antonio, understands the challenges that rental homeowners face. To make rental home upkeep more convenient, the company offers services that protect rental investments, minimize costs, and maximize its clients' income, without interrupting their daily life. From tenant screening to home maintenance, Camelot Properties provides solutions for single rental property owners or investors with several rental homes.

"Our boutique brokerage goes a long way in providing you specialized attention, comfort, and efficiency, so you are not just another client with an account number," said Jessica Alaine, founder of Camelot Properties.

Alaine's extensive knowledge and expertise in creative design, development, planning, and project management skills make her one of the most sought-after property management brokers in Texas. As a licensed real estate broker and accredited luxury home specialist in the area, Alaine's positive energy and vision delight many of her residential and investor clientele.

Her range of experience after nearly a decade as the founder and president of Camelot's Consulting resulted in many successes she shares with her team at the company. She has also planned and produced various events and is consistently working with various 501c3 organizations she feels can make a difference.

Her professional memberships include the San Antonio Board of Realtors, the Texas Association of Realtors, and the National Association of Realtors.

Alaine has a double degree in mass media and communications, along with other extensive training.
