

LOVE

(by SusanBensonTodd & “others”)

Involves Everything...

good and bad.

“The whole of history is the work of Love.”

Hopefully there will always be more Love than Hate.

“Traditional symbols of love (often) express a duality in which the two antagonistic elements are (or could be), nevertheless, reconciled.

Symbols used in LOVE which relate to subject of Love are the following:

“the dualism of Ancient Chinese ‘Yin and Yang’ divides the left side, or ‘yin,’ as Receptive, Ideas, Discovery, and Generation and the ‘yang’ side as Aggressive, Markets, Products, Growth They can be complementary, interconnected, and interrelate to one another.” (Google)

the Cross where the upright beam is the world-axis and the cross-beam or the world of phenomena...are symbols of Conjunction, or the ultimate goal of true Love: the elimination of dualism and separation.” (p185 Lorelei : THE LOVER

Inverted (upside down) cross represents humility...reaching down towards the earth.” by Fontana

Other Symbols included in LOVE are:

Heart “the will to believe, deriving from “our heart,” instincts and courage,...our passionate and volitional nature,...which science and logic provide.” by Pascal, WSJ: 9-29-‘12

Circles mean ‘Pearl Mother;’ or the enjoyment of the interaction with others.

An Open circle for some groups of SW Indians lets the spirits move through the circle.

Oval shapes “appear in pagan cultures as a symbol for the sun god.” by Fontana

“When horizontal becomes the all-seeing eye, best known in Horus’(Egyptian lord of the skies), by Fontana

A Peace sign means Hope for Peace.

Being White which also symbolizes Hope, it gives a 'double whammy' of positive message.

The wavy (white) line is the 'River of Life,/ Go with the Flow.'

LOVE is painted somewhat like a landscape, thus the River and/or the water, soil, vegetation, and the sunlight also represent the elements needed for life.

Today we see an angry, almost a jealous, resentful need, for Humans to be in charge, to control others, or seek power... almost as if there is a rebelliousness or an anger in much of the world.

Thus, in LOVE, the smaller middle "core" area has the darker, more severe colors which represent these negative feelings:

"Red means power, (sometimes) overly aggressive, (Red can) turn people "off;"

Black means being restricted, rigid, and resentful.

Navy or Dark Blue sometimes means sadness and gloom; unknown, mysterious, and maybe loyal to a fault.

Green can mean bitter, or shy." We also know the saying 'green with Envy.'

Fortunately among people (or groups) with a visible lack of Love, there is often, is a hidden squelched Love.

That is where more Positive Colors that surround the darker, negative colors in LOVE come into play.

Being larger areas they hopefully influence others!

They represent happier traits found in most people, whether hidden or not. Hopefully there are larger numbers of positive, loving people who might break down or replace the negativity:

“Yellow means Love, intelligence, purity, and friendliness and can be stimulating and up-lifting.

Pink also means Love.

Blue also means Loving, friendly, or honesty, everlasting and harmony; also New ways of thinking; original ideas

Light Blue means purity and happiness.

Orange also means Hope, light, energy; also adventure-some and/or flamboyant.

Purple means meditative.

Gold means loyal, and/ or organized.

And, luckily

Green also means Harmony, or a new beginning as in growth and nature, a positive influence!!

White, a crucial color (or in a scientific meaning white is a lack of color) and has a huge role in LOVE, because it also means

Hope,” and it is the axis or the ‘river that runs through’ and between the myriad of colors, reaching all people in LOVE, both the Positive and the Negative, the

Ying-Yang, giving

Hope of LOVE instead of Hate, and a more promising future to all.

My sources are from collected and filed random copied articles, and pages in books like the one mentioned above: “The Lover,” by Lorelei