"I live a dream in a nightmare world"

OPEN LETTER TO THE EXPRESS

They say that competition in business is a good thing as it gives consumers choice and a vehicle that allows them to negotiate fair price for equal services and goods.

The Oshawa Durham Central Newspaper being the largest and oldest independent newspaper in Durham with offices in Canada and the United States.

Servicing Durham for the past 25years. Welcome healthy competition. Competition that is founded on integrity and substance.

Competition that is recognized across Canada and the world for it's service to community and the preservation of industry standards.

With this said it is up each and every editor/publisher to uphold the integrity of the trade. With professionalism second to none.

Unfortunately some that enter the publishing industry forget to uphold standards.

Recently it has been brought to my attention that a sales person from a smaller newspaper the 'OSHAWA EXPRESS' by the name of Sharon Salmon, Advertising Sales Consultant has been going around and tarnishing not only our good name but that of her own employer by making slanderous and derogatory comments. This has to STOP.

Spreading lies to attempt to steal clients is wrong and clearly shows the lack of integrity and desperation of that employee and the company that allows her to do it. After all, if you actually pick up one of the Express copies you will clearly note that they have only a handful of clients and some are the ones that don't pay so end up at the EXPRESS.

I have signed statements from five long time advertisers claiming that this employee has been spreading lies and expressed derogatory, slanderous and libelous comments in an attempt to flip advertisers. This is the same newspaper that is so desperate for business that in their classified have gone to the extend to include a section named 'AD CENTRAL' to falsely mislead advertiser to think they are advertising in the Oshawa Durham Central Classified.

Durham's largest classified section with the broadest advertising discipline base of all the papers.

Could it be an oversight on the editors part that 'AD CENTRAL' may be seen as an attempt to copy the Central Classified? Is it a deliberate attempt to mislead consumers? Or is it just another desperate attempt to generate cash flow by copying the success of The Central?

I bring this to the public attention as those advertisers that have been approached in this very unprofessional manner are demanding that this type of practice stop at once. This in part is why they volunteer supplied written statements to the same.

No one minds open and fair competition. But when a company must lie and defame competitors. This is wrong.

Lucky for the Central Newspaper, the reputation and excellence in service carries them through attempts by scoundrels to defame the Central's good name. We at the Central Newspaper pride ourselves in being the only true public access to the press. We are not bought by municipal, Provincial or Federal political contracts. We are not about cliche like "WELL WRITTEN, WELL READ". The question is by who? So well read that the EXPRESS publishes on it's front page that they charge $1.00, yet they are distributed FREE of charge. Is this upholding the integrity of the industry? Charlatans and scoundrels attempting to shroud themselves in a profession that main purpose is to uphold the integrity of the industry. The Central Newspaper is available at over 400 locations across Durham Region. At most large retailers including Walmart. It would have been easy to turn another cheek and ignore the smallest newspaper that only services Oshawa. I think that would not have served the best interest of the community as the truth needs to be told and a clear message need to be sent to advertisers. The Central prides itself in bringing a return for your advertisement investment. Consumer Be aware.

A DARK CLOUD HANGS OVER THE NATION

By Larry Klayman

Twice in the last two weeks I have traveled to Washington, D.C., an increasingly dark place where I lived continuously for over 25 years beginning in 1979. Perhaps it's no coincidence that during these recent trips, gray storm clouds hung over the city.

During my multi-decade history in this ever-increasing capital of corruption, I first was a Justice Department trial attorney and prosecutor who was on the trial team that broke up the AT&T telephone monopoly and enforced food and drug, agricultural, banking, aviation and consumer protection laws.

In a few years, growing disillusioned with so-called government service, which I came to view a politically compromised, I left to join a boutique international trade law firm and later opened my own law firm. Fighting against government deceit on behalf of my private clients and experiencing a myriad of hack judges, especially on the federal bench, I conceived of and founded Judicial Watch on July 29, 1994, out of desperation. If I had not taken up the mantle as the "anti-lawyer" at Judicial Watch, I would have quit the profession; that is how disillusioned I had become over the lack of intellectual integrity and honesty in not just the government but the legal profession in general.

As I write about in my autobiography, "Whores: Why and How I Came to Fight the Establishment," I used Judicial Watch not just to watch over judges and try to hold them accountable to the Constitution and the rule of law in general, but also petition judges to rule over and serve as a check to the other two branches of government – the executive and legislative branches. In effect, I had created a private Justice Department for the People, not the bureaucrats in Washington, D.C., and our state capitals.

Over the course of the next 10 years while I was at the helm of Judicial Watch, we experienced a number of successes, in particular holding Bill and Hillary Clinton to account for their over 40 major scandals while in office. In this regard, I am the only lawyer in American history to actually have a court rule that a sitting president of the United States committed a crime. This came with a decision by one of the few non-politicized federal judges worthy of having been put on the bench, the Honorable Royce C. Lamberth, who found that President Clinton had committed a crime when he released the White House file of a woman, Kathleen Willey, whom he had harassed in the Oval Office. This was a violation of the Privacy Act.

But growing weary over time with the government's inaction in meting out justice for the corrupt likes of Bill and Hillary Clinton, I left Judicial Watch on Sept. 19, 2003, to run for the U.S. Senate in my home state of Florida. My idea was to take the concept of Judicial Watch inside the Senate chamber – with a staff of nearly 100, as Florida had grown to the third-largest state in population by then – in effect, to create a law firm, much like a Trojan Horse, to mete out justice from within the belly of the government beast.

I did not win election to the Senate, largely because it was not the right time for me to run. I had just gone through a divorce and was not mentally or financially prepared to take on President George W. Bush's election machine that greased the path of the eventual winner, Mel Martinez, who had been W's secretary of housing and urban development. In addition, an individual I had left behind at Judicial Watch, Tom Fitton, who then seized control of the public interest group I had founded, did all he could to harm me and my family. In my opinion, Fitton, a non-lawyer, feared that I would overshadow him as U.S. senator. The scar tissue this "feud" engendered continues to this day, 16 years later.

After the Senate campaign, I moved briefly to Cleveland, Ohio, and joined a conventional Republican law firm to be closer to my two young children who had moved there with my ex-wife. But in just about nine months, realizing that I could not morph into and be a conventional lawyer, I moved back to Miami, Florida, and reopened my private practice. Later, I founded Freedom Watch, a name I borrowed from the television drama "West Wing." Its executive producer, Aaron Sorkin, had created a character fashioned after me named Harry Klaypool of Freedom Watch.

This remains my calling today. At Freedom Watch I have scored some major victories in the last years: enjoining the Obama Deep State National Security Agency from unconstitutional mass surveillance, participating in a case that legally killed Obama's executive order granting amnesty to over 5 million illegal aliens, playing a major role in having the indictment of Cliven Bundy and his sons dismissed and successfully defending Dr. Jerome Corsi during the recent witch hunt of Special Counsel Robert Mueller, to name just a few successes.

But despite this, my visits back to the capital of corruption these last two weeks, marred by gray skies and a continuing witch hunt against the 45th president of the United States and his family, all to subvert the Constitution, heightened within me my metastasized concern over the deep decline in not just our body politic, but the cancerous state of the nation as a whole.

And, that is why, like Wyatt Earp, a lawman and U.S. marshal who was forced to justifiably break the law to enforce the law in the old west, We the People are at a crossroads, with the nation's survival at stake. While my modus operandi is to peacefully and legally take out the outlaws before they take us out, the time has come for very strong action.

Yes, we are headed for a "legal shoot out" at the "Not OK Corral," to eliminate the criminals who are running our nation into the ground. Washington, D.C., a dark place, is today more akin to Tombstone, Arizona, in the days of Wyatt Earp than the shining city on a hill envisioned by our Founding Fathers and later aspired to by President Ronald Reagan.
