

I TAKE THIS WOMAN . . .

By Tabitha Korol

The internet provides everything you'd want to know about courtships, weddings, married life, but few of them include the instructions on wife-beating. There is a brief but enlightening film, produced by the Middle East Media Research Institute (MEMRI) and posted on Jihad Watch, of a Muslim sociologist who demonstrates the "proper" wife-beating technique. Of course, the sociologist assures his audience that Islam is merciful, and that the man, the head of the household, should not have to beat his wife every day, and to do so lightly, never to hit her face or head, bruise, break bones or cause blood to flow (m10:12, Reliance of the Traveller, A Classic Manual of Islamic Sacred Law – ROTT). But the cautionary statement rings hollow when the wife's bruises will never be seen because she must be covered from head to toe. And, should she become inured to the discipline's sameness, there are other means of control and punishment available to him, all sanctioned by The Religion of Peace.

When is it necessary to beat one's wife? The sociologist did posit that there are women who prefer domineering, authoritative, and even violent husbands. For the most part, however, beatings are needed when the wife has disobeyed him and the strict Islamic rules of marriage. She may have refused to wear a hijab (m2:7-8, ROTT) or the finery he chose for her; or fancied attending school with the hope of one day having a career and earning a wage. She may have wanted to leave the house unaccompanied or without her husband's permission; she is literally under house arrest. The Shari'a marriage contract contains her virginity status, the dowry amount, and grants sexual intercourse rights to the male, giving him total control over his wife or wives. Should she refuse his advances, be too ill or too young to have sex, or if she engaged in sex with another man or was raped, he could stop her daily (financial) maintenance. The woman is considered a she-devil, equal to a domestic animal, harmful and with crooked character. Therefore, he may disallow her to sleep in his bed; or lock her in a room, naked, and without food. Should he choose to enact a simple divorce by repeating "I divorce you" three times – she may receive no more than three months' maintenance and could lose her children older than age seven. The Muslim husband has the right to accuse her of adultery, in which case he might gather his friends and neighbors together to bury her almost up to her shoulders and stone her to death. The film, The Stoning of Soraya M, portrays the true story of Soraya, in Iran, whose husband Ali convinced their two sons and the townsfolk that she was committing adultery so that he could marry a 14-year-old girl. The Internet has an actual film of a Syrian woman being stoned to death by ISIS. About four women per day are murdered in "stove bursts" in Pakistan, by husbands or in-laws who claim the wives' scarves caught fire while they were cooking. We are assured, however, that the discipline of beating, although necessary, is done out of love and once that's done, life can move on. But from where does this sociologist get the concept of love? Surely, not from the Qur'an, which clearly stipulates that women are inferior and may be taken by force or bought from her parents. There is no Western-style courtship – no dating, no music or dancing under the stars, and no dining in a candlelit café. In fact, there is no courtship whatsoever. Rather, a shari'a marriage is a document, usually signed at the home of the future bride, that grants sexual intercourse rights to the male with complete control over his wife or wives. Revered Muslim theologian, Imam Ghazali (1058-1111) defined, "Marriage is a form of slavery. The woman is the man's slave, and her duty therefore is absolute obedience to the husband in all that he asks of her person."

Interestingly, the marriage contract provides four blank spaces to be completed over time. Below the signature of wife number one, there are three more signature lines for future wives, numbers two, three, and four. The realization that there could be three more wives with whom she would share her husband and home immediately negates love and devotion; the religious sanction of polygamy destroys the possibility of fidelity between one man and one woman, while also increasing rivalry, conflict and stress. The message is unambiguous: "You can be replaced." Not only does the man have the divine right to four wives, but also to "pleasure marriages." Only he, not she, has the right to such dalliances, and only he, not she, has the right to divorce. He may even rid himself of the four he has and begin anew, with four wives plus "slave wives." The Islamic woman is among the poorest and most oppressed in the world, and regardless of her financial station, she is caged for life. She cannot be rescued when beaten and her husband has the right to not provide an explanation to anyone for beating her, for the Prophet has said, "A man will not be asked as to why he beat his wife." Sunan Abu Dawad 11:2142. This must be reassuring.

Muslim societies are based on enslavement – the enslavement of society to the state/ideology and women to men. The Saudi woman is always guilty, even if he breaks her ribs during a beating, and she is so victimized that denial of her situation is her only comfort. Muslim women are imprisoned for sexual crimes done by men, yet Islam insists it honors women. The indemnity for the death or injury of a woman is one-half the indemnity paid for a man. (o4.9, ROTT).

In a Muslim society, the woman's virginity is the basis of the family's honor, and honor killings are acts of vengeance executed by likeminded family members against the female family member, for reasons such as becoming "too westernized," refusing an arranged marriage, being the victim of a sexual assault, seeking a divorce, or (allegedly) committing adultery. The mere perception that a woman has behaved in a "dishonorable" way is sufficient reason for murder; methods include stoning, stabbing, beating, mutilation, burning, beheading, hanging, throat slashing, lethal acid attacks, shooting and strangulation. Women's advocacy groups suspect that more than 20,000 women are killed worldwide each year. The UK recorded 2,823 such crimes in 2010.

Sex for the male in Islam is a plenteous buffet of alternatives, and he need never be indicted for adultery, pederasty, infant or youth pedophilia, rape, or honor killings. He even has permission to engage in sex with his wife's cadaver within seven hours of her death. During a televised show in Egypt, Professor Sheikh Sabri Abdul Raouf, of the Islamic world's most prestigious madrasa, was asked if it is permissible for a husband to penetrate his wife after death (necrophilia). He replied, "It is not favorable in Islam; however Islamic law considers it as halal," it is permissible, not a crime or sin deserving of punishment in the here or hereafter.

Men, particularly "courageous" jihadis, are rewarded with sex with perpetually exquisite virgin women, so that women are not just in competition and threatened by other women (wives) on earth, but also by supermodels in the afterlife. The Religion of Peace offers no peace to women at any time – not in infancy, not when they are genitally mutilated in childhood or married off against their will, not in their adulthood, and not even after their death. We must never allow Shari'a law to overtake our own American laws.

LARRY KLAYMAN

ATTORNEY AT LAW

TANGLED WEB: CLINTON NEMESIS PETER PAUL'S LINK TO BRUCE OHR

By Larry Klayman

In 2001, two years before I left Judicial Watch to run for the U.S. Senate in Florida, I was contacted by a person who identified himself as Peter Paul. A former lawyer from Miami, he asked me meet him there at what was then Judicial Watch's Southern Regional Office.

When Peter and I did meet in our offices in Biscayne Tower a few days later, he revealed to me how he had put on the Hollywood tribute to Bill Clinton in the waning days of Slick Willy's administration. This event was in reality a fundraiser for Hillary Clinton's 2000 U.S. Senate campaign in New York. Peter was then the head of a company called Stan Lee Media, and indeed it was he who had in effect "resurrected" Stan Lee, his partner, from the shadows of his former prominent past to later go on to again become "rich and famous." Sadly, the legendary Stan Lee – the creator of Spiderman and many other comic book heroes – recently died, but the Peter Paul saga, as discussed below, lives on with the current spate of government Clinton-related scandals.

Peter explained that, unknown to him at the time, the money he raised for Hillary's Senate campaign constituted illegal hard money contributions – almost $2 million dollars over the legal limit for a single donation. Peter also explained why he thought he might be the subject of ongoing federal investigations by the U.S. Department of Justice (DOJ).

Proposing that he would assist Judicial Watch and me to finally bring the Clintons to justice, Peter proposed that we represent him in defense of any potential criminal charges that might be conjured up against him. On behalf of Judicial Watch, I agreed to do so.

As evidence of his dealings with the Clintons, Peter revealed canceled checks and photos of the "First Family lovebirds" embracing him and his wife, as well as videos of their meetings and interactions. Peter also revealed that he had offered Bill millions of dollars in "financial benefits" if the then president would join his companies to promote them after he left office. To this end, Clinton willingly accepted the offer.

To make this long story short – and you can read about it in depth in my autobiography, "Whores: Why and How I Came to Fight the Establishment!" – Peter was ultimately unjustly indicted for securities and bank fraud, while – you guessed it – the Clintons skated free for their campaign finance and related crimes.

This was despite my efforts to have what was then the George W. Bush DOJ thoroughly investigate and bring criminal charges against the Clintons – with the hard evidence Peter had produced. Typically, the Deep State-infested Justice Department – comprised even today of over 97 percent Clinton/Democrat loyalist attorneys – circled the wagons for the Bonnie and Clyde of American politics and, while criminally charging Peter, looked the other way from the Clintons' crimes.

And who at DOJ was assigned by Attorney General John Ashcroft and his head of the Criminal Division, Michael Chertoff, to investigate and then cover up the Clinton crimes Peter had revealed? None other than one Bruce Ohr, who was then head of the department's Organized Crime Task Force.

To this end, Ohr and his DOJ/FBI agents traveled to Sao Paulo, Brazil, to interview Peter where he was arrested at the time he was indicted in the United States. Peter had a home in Brazil, since one of his other companies, Mondo English, an internet language service, was headquartered there. The interviews occurred in a dark Brazilian prison where Peter was being held pending extradition.

So much for Peter's cooperation agreement with the corrupted DOJ. Ohr and his minions covered up the Clinton crimes, while only indicting Hillary's finance person, David Rosen. A jury in Los Angeles ultimately acquitted Rosen because they ostensibly could not understand why he was being hung out to dry while Hillary was left untouched.

In the end, thanks in large part to Tom Fitton and other directors I had left behind at Judicial Watch having reneged on the agreement to defend Peter, he wound up being wrongly convicted and later did 10 years in prison and under house arrest.

But the other culprit in this legal outrage was Bruce Ohr, who resurfaced during today's ongoing Fusion GPS and Steele Dossier scandal – which, with the aid of Bruce Ohr's wife, Nellie, triggered the Mueller Russian collusion "witch hunt" targeting President Donald Trump.

It is now no surprise that Ohr, who obviously was a latent Clinton loyalist at the time of Peter Paul's indictment, remained a Clinton loyalist many years later when he and his wife played a crucial role – along with James Comey, Andrew McCabe, Peter Strzok, Lisa Page, Rod Rosenstein and other "criminals" – in attempting a coup d'etat against the 45th president of the United States.

The past is indeed a prologue: To hear Peter, after 18 years in absentia, talk about it listen to his radio interview on "Special Prosecutor with Larry Klayman." Please share this interview and a follow-up one next week with fellow patriots, as the story of Peter Paul exposes the corruption not just at DOJ but in our legal system as a whole. (For a local listing of my syndicated radio show see www.freedomwatchusa.org.)

And that is why I urge you to join Freedom Watch's Justice League and support our citizens grand juries and other hard-hitting legal actions. We just don't get documents, and we certainly do not ask our so-called government to mete out justice. We and you must do it ourselves, peacefully and legally! Go to www.freedomwatchusa.org to support this just cause to protect and preserve our God-given rights and freedoms.
