

AMERICA MOVING FROM ABORTIONS 'SAFE, LEGAL AND RARE' TO MERRIMENT OVER INFANTICIDE

By Rev. Mark H. Creech

Much of America was shocked to learn about New York's passage of a law that allows for an abortion during all nine months of a woman's pregnancy, and for any reason. The law so expands abortion that even a child born alive in a botched procedure isn't protected. The new law says health care practitioners who are not physicians may also terminate the child within the womb. It removes abortion from New York's state criminal code, meaning if a baby in utero was to die from an assault on a woman there could be no severe prosecution. Furthermore, the New York law allows young girls of every age to have an abortion without parental consent.

The passage of the abortion bill was met with cheers and thunderous applause in the Gallery of the State Senate. After signing the legislation in the Capital's Red Room, Governor Cuomo ordered the state's One World Trade Center's spire, the Gov. Mario M. Cuomo Bridge, the Kosciuszko Bridge, and the Alfred E. Smith Building to be lit up in celebratory pink.

If ever the country was seemingly and largely immunized from the unspeakable evil of child-killing, what happened recently in New York should be the antidote. Wickedness is always progressive, and Americans are moving from the so-called objective of making abortions "safe, legal and rare" to merriment over infanticide.

What adds to these alarming circumstances is that "before New York's legislature voted to remove gestational limits on abortion, seven states and Washington, D.C., already had laws allowing third-trimester abortions," reports the Christian Post. Those states, say the CP, are Alaska, Colorado, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New Mexico, New York, Oregon, and Vermont, and the nation's capital. What is more, every state that has laws banning late-term abortions still allow it under certain circumstances, one of which can include "mental health" – a loophole in abortion rights law large enough through which a locomotive could pass.

Just recently a Virginia delegate, Kathy Tran (D), pushed for the passage of her bill, which failed, but would have allowed abortion at every stage of pregnancy including during labor. Rhode Island's Gov. Gina Raimondo (D) has been pushing for legislation that allows abortions until live birth and also tramples parental rights by allowing minors to have an abortion without parental consent.

North Carolinians needn't rest easy either. In 2017, companion legislation introduced by Democrats in the state House and Senate was very similar to New York's new abortion law. Neither piece of legislation, S. B. 588 – Whole Woman's Health Act and H.B. 563 by the same title, was acted upon by the House or Senate, and it's a good thing they weren't. The legislation would have legalized late-term abortions, repealed the state's "Woman's Right to Know" law, legalized sex-selection abortions, allowed physician assistant abortions, allowed post 20 week abortions to be performed in clinics, eviscerated statistical reporting of abortions, expanded the type of physicians who could perform abortions to any physician and not simply an OB/GYN or those with experience.

Certainly, if the Democrats had been in the majority and not the Republicans, the legislation would have succeeded, and our current Governor, Roy Cooper (D), would have gleefully signed it into law. That's not being politically partisan; it's just the reality of the matter. Three years before the Supreme Court's decision to legalize abortion, Dr. Malcolm Watts wrote for the California Medical Association:

"The traditional Western ethic has always placed great emphasis on the intrinsic worth and equal value of every human life regardless of its stage or condition. This ethic had the blessing of the Judeo-Christian heritage and has been the basis for most of our laws and much of our social policy.... This traditional ethic is still clearly dominant, but there is much to suggest that it is being eroded at its core and may eventually even be abandoned...."

We are now at that point in our national history where the core erosion is giving way to abandonment.

If this barbarism ever ends, it will be because those who love Christ and know the Word of God have fearlessly proclaimed the truth and shown the way. The media certainly won't do it. The news media was once good for telling the whole story, but not anymore. In yesteryear, the newsreels displayed in their reports the emaciated dead bodies of Jews piled like cordwood that had been killed by the Nazis. During the Jim Crow era, the media presented pictures of blacks lynched from trees with White Supremacists standing around like it was a community picnic. When the Vietnam War was going on, major news outlets brought the horrific images of that conflict into our living rooms. American troops were bared as they were: bloody, burned, shot and blown to pieces.

These days, however, we never see the news showing what happens to an infant during an actual abortion, especially a late-term abortion. We can't hear the silent scream. We don't see the doctor plunge the poisonous needle into the little one's beating heart. We never see the legs, arms, torsos, and other body parts of unborn children oozing from a bloody birth canal or cast into the trash after the abortionist's knife has done its ghastly work. Neither do we witness the infant from a spoiled abortion left underneath a pile of towels, neglected on a cold clinic table, or twisting like a live piece of refuse in a bedpan.

All of these grisly things remain hidden and kept in secret. It would seem if the state of New York had done something so stupendous as to light up a city with festive lights, then the news media ought to let the public see what's actually being celebrated. But do you think that will happen? No, because if they did, the practice of abortion might be abandoned in a New York minute.

Christians need to see that it can no longer be business as usual. This is not to subtly suggest violence, or some other unlawful means, must be employed to halt the blitz on life's sanctity. God forbid! Nevertheless, it is to suggest Christians lovingly sharing the Gospel of Christ with people in the abortion field, educating others from a pro-life perspective, contributing generously to the pro-life cause, and supporting politicians and legislation which will protect and preserve life. Most importantly, Christians need to stop being hypocritical and having abortions themselves.

It is also to suggest that if Christ's emissaries and other pro-lifers cannot demonstrate a passion equal to or superior to that of abortion proponents, the killing will continue. It will grow until next it is the aged, the weak, the sick, the political reject, etc. If they can find a justification for celebrating the destruction of an innocent and defenseless gestational nine-month-old baby, they can find the same for killing you!

ATTORNEY AT LAW

THE REAL STONE COLD TRUTH!

By Larry Klayman

There is so much misinformation in the media these days, that it is hard for even political pundits and couch potatoes to sift through and even try to understand it all. No more is this true than with regard to Roger Stone, a former political consultant and now host on Infowars who, along with his buddies Paul Manafort, Rick Gates and others long ago founded or played a role in the firm of Black, Manafort, Stone and Kelly. While I do not wish to cast aspersions on Charley Black and the others in this days-gone-by consulting and lobbying firm, which played a role in the election of George H.W. Bush and other Republicans, Roger Stone's downhill evolution since these early days has gone from what was billed as a legitimate political operative to a self styled dirty trickster whose heroes include the infamous Roy Cohn and Meyer Lansky, played in the "Godfather" by Hyman Roth. Just watch the Netflix documentary "Get Me Roger Stone" to see what I mean. Roger, to many who don't know who he really is, can seem to be an engaging figure. In fact, you can read about him in my autobiography "Whores: Why and How I Came to Fight the Establishment," published in 2009 but written years earlier after my 2003-2004 campaign for the U.S. Senate in Florida. The book is still available at www.wnd.com, www.amazon.com and www.barnesandnoble.com, among other on-line booksellers. In it I chronicle how Roger, who for a few short weeks was, along with the ethically challenged friends he brought into my campaign with him, such as his "yes man" Michael Caputo as an alleged press secretary, was my campaign manager. While I admittedly in retrospect made a huge mistake in asking him to help me be elected senator from Florida, my home state, when after a few weeks my other staff and I saw that he was exploiting me and failed to disclose that he was also shamelessly representing Al Sharpton, who then wanted to run for president, we parted ways. And when Stone left, his friends like Caputo, having already milked me of personal funds that I had committed to my campaign, took tens of thousands of dollars of computers and cell phones which I had personally paid for. To this day, I have never recovered from this financially and at the time it certainly destroyed my chances to be elected senator.

I chose not to sue Stone then, because I tried to remain focused and not be diverted with my prospects to becoming senator. But from that point forward, I never wanted to have anything to do with him!

When news of Special Counsel Mueller's investigation first broke a few years ago, knowing of Stone's relationship with President Donald Trump, I remarked to a number of colleagues how I thought, knowing Roger's "proclivities," that this would spell trouble down the line for The Donald. In fact, Stone, obviously for profit and to further his own egotistical grandstanding, boasted that he could get a pardon for my client Cliven Bundy. He even flew out to Nevada to try to enmesh himself in the criminal trial. At the time, I warned the Bundys to stay away from him, as "bad news" which would only be used to further unjustly harm their reputation. I also did not want Stone to exploit them as he had done with me. There were other instances where Stone, like a vulture, tried to figuratively pick the financial flesh off of other high-profile clients I was representing. I also successfully warned them to stay away for their own good. Roger, in my opinion, was a disaster waiting to happen.

And, sure enough the Stone Cold Truth, the name of Roger's show on Infowars, has now taken on a "special counsel meaning." The "truth" is that just as I warned my clients, his desire to tie himself publicly to the president, creating the false mystique for his own ego and financial pursuits that he was the main reason Trump was elected, has given rise for the left to use this as a wedge against Trump. In effect, the charges against Stone, lying under oath and threatening material witnesses, such as Randy Credico, are being used to tar our great president. It's commonly called guilt by association. For the president the wise valedictorian speech and words of comedian Rodney Dangerfield in his classic film "Back to School" ring true: "Look out for number one and don't step in number two." And, it was for this reason that Donald Trump attempted to create an appearance of distancing himself from Stone both during the campaign and thereafter. It sadly did not work.

In recent weeks, trying to deflect first from the prospect of being indicted and then actually being indicted by the Special Counsel, Stone has gone on a public relations campaign to smear and defame my brave client Dr. Jerome Corsi, who unlike Stone told the truth to the Special Counsel and other government authorities, and did not threaten witnesses. For this obvious reason, Jerry, who is Person 1 in the Stone indictment, was not charged with any wrongdoing. While the Special Counsel and the grand jury effectively named Dr. Corsi as a material witness to what will now be the ensuing prosecution of Stone this summer or fall, this was not Jerry's doing.

Jerry has never said that he is "happy to testify" against Stone, a falsehood principally whipped up by one of Roger's surrogates (like the more than low class Cassandra Fairbanks who recently defamed him on Newsmax), a reporter named Chuck Ross of The Daily Caller, to try to turn conservative support away from Jerry and instead fill the coffers of Stone's defense fund. It is no coincidence that Stone writes for this publication, founded by Tucker Carlson and it is no coincidence that Carlson has been running interference for Stone on his Fox News Show, as late as last Friday, when he had both Roger and his friend Caputo on camera, following a hearing before Judge Amy Berman Jackson where she warned the defendant about showboating in an attempt in large part to obviously intimidate witnesses and pollute the jury pool. For this reason, Judge Jackson asked the parties to brief by this Friday whether she should impose a gag order on Stone.

Let me be crystal clear here! Neither Jerry nor I have taken any action to harm Stone and if my client is subpoenaed to testify he will simply tell the truth, something Roger should have done. But Stone's attempts to intimidate Jerry by defaming him and his defense counsel, yours truly, smacks of the same type of witness tampering with which he is charged concerning Person 2 in the Mueller indictment. There Stone is alleged to have physically threatened, Meyer Lansky style, and even kill Credico and his dog.

And this is why the "Real Stone Cold Truth" is that by attacking Jerry and me, Roger is giving credence to and compounding the crimes for which he was indicted. And, for this reason, on Jerry's behalf I will be filing this Friday an amicus brief arguing that in the interest of justice, Stone be gagged from defaming, threatening and attempting to influence and undercut the likely testimony of my client: commonly known as witness tampering.
