WHO WILL WIN? WHO WILL YOU BE VOTING FOR?

DURHAM - The Central took it to the streets. We wanted to find out your thoughts. Who do you think will win and who will you be voting for. As it stand with this 'snap' elections most voters have little or limited information on the candidates running. Many new candidates run on no budget or shoe string budgets. On the surface, it appears that most running are nothing more than looking for a higher paying job. This past week Rogers, Oshawa candidate debate was a total disaster. Candidates attempted to repeat party politics without really grasping it's applications to the community they are wanting to represent. Candidates across the region, have failed to even notify local media of their personal biographies or reasons for running and or that they are in the race.

Most local media, newsprint, radio have had limited or no candidate coverage. The average person has been left in the dark and this may reflected on the voter turn out at the polls. A long standing Liberal, stated. "I have voted Liberal for the longest time. I had enough. I have no clue on who my local representative is. I think I will vote NDP this time around." Jerry Harp, Oshawa. The battle for positioning intensifies as everyone wants to make it to Ottawa. The race to keep an eye is the Pickering/Brooklin riding. The incumbent Liberal is not running again and is turning the leadership to the new to politics candidate Juanita Nathan. A candidate that has so far ran dormant as her history and her efforts to be elected are silent. The strategy is that people will vote based on Federal party interests and not on that of the particular or local candidate. The challenger Conservative candidate Alicia Vianga also appears to be suffering from the same strategy. No real information has been released about the candidates, in hope the voters will bring her in on party name recognition. Then you have:

 Centrist: Zainab Rana
 Green: Andrea Wood
 Liberal: Juanita Nathan
 NDP: Jamie David Nye
 One candidate that may surprise everyone is the PPC candidate, Lisa Robinson. Lisa Robinson, a notorious Pickering councillor that has gained local, national and international fame for her constant efforts to push against the establishment and bring the truth and accountability to the people. She has pushed so hard, that the City of Pickering has used policy and regulation to silence her by cutting her pay for over 90 days. This feat, has gained the recognition of being 'the people's councillor'. Now running under the conservative People's Party of Canada. She could be a real choice for many tired of how the government treats taxpayers. Her voice in Ottawa may be game changer and something many are looking forward to seeing. Ted Ferraro of Pickering said, "I been following candidate Robinson for sometime. I have even witnessed the PPC party leader praise her for determination and what the party leader deem her as a politicians with 'real balls'. This was his words. I think Robinson will be a breath of fresh air if she gets in. I encourage everyone to give her a chance." Ajax is another interesting municipality that is up for grabs.

 Centrist: Faisal Ali
 Conservative: Greg Brady
 Green: Leigh Paulseth
 Liberal: Jennifer McKelvie
 NDP: Kyle Forster
 This race can't be determined on name recognition as most of the candidates are yet to disclose their platforms and or any personal information. In Whitby things may be a little different.
 Centrist: Nouman Mian
 Conservative: Steve Yamada
 Green: Andrew Di Lullo
 Liberal: Ryan Turnbull*
 NDP: Kevin Goswell
 The race here is one to keep and eye out for much like in Pickering.
 Whitby councillor Steve Yamada. A very recognizable name in the community is up against an incumbent with national recognition and experience Ryan Turnbull. This race will come down to party pull. Will the people want another four years of Liberal representation from a seasoned MP or will they risk it and bring in Yamada's blue wave?

 For Bowmanville-Oshawa North
 Centrist: Ghuzna Imam
 Christian Heritage: Thomas Zekveld
 Conservative: Jamil Jivani*
 Green: Julie Dietrich
 Independent: Pranay Gunti
 Liberal: Bridget Girard
 NDP: Elenor Marano
 Rhinoceros: Adam Smith
 United: Clint Cole
 In this race. The incumbent Jamil Jivani for the PC is being endorsed by this newspaper. His riding has a rich history of PC leadership and challengers do not appear to have the momentum to challenge Jivani.
