Mayor Roy's Statement On The Canada-Ontario Partnership To Build

This week's announcement of the Canada-Ontario Partnership to Build is a positive step in addressing the housing affordability crisis, and an example of what's possible when all levels of government work together on shared solutions. I am encouraged to see the federal and provincial governments committing to funding the infrastructure needed to support housing growth. This signals a more balanced approach -- one that recognizes the cost of building complete communities should not fall disproportionately on homebuyers or property taxpayers. At a time when affordability is out of reach for many, any step that helps ease that burden is welcome.
