

Juanita Nathan

I was pleased to attend a productive roundtable on combatting organized retail theft alongside Secretary of State, Hon Ruby Sahota ; the Attorney General of Ontario, Doug Downey ; and the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Justice, Patricia Lattanzio.

The discussion brought together key partners who work every day to support businesses, protect workers, and help ease pressures on families — including representatives from York Regional Police, Peel Regional Police, Toronto Police Service, as well as industry leaders such as Home Depot and Cadillac Fairview.

We spoke about the key issues driving organized retail theft, the impact on frontline employees and consumers, and how jurisdictional gaps can contribute to repeat offending. Strengthening coordination between federal, provincial, and municipal partners is critical to addressing these challenges.

We also discussed how Bill C-14 works to help combat organized retail theft by strengthening tools available to law enforcement and the justice system, targeting repeat offenders, and reinforcing accountability measures. Legislative action, combined with strong community partnerships, is essential to improving public safety and protecting local businesses.
