

Providence Challenges, Part I

God gives you the power to stop one event. Which would it be?

A car accident that kills your best friend.

A small plane crash that kills eight doctors on a trip to Kenya where they were going to volunteer in a large refugee camp for a month.

The explosion and fire in a large that kills 219 people in New Jersey.

An earthquake and mudslide that kills 13,000 people in a very primitive region of Nicaragua.

CLOSEOUT THOUGHTS: In my mind sin is, to a great degree, attitudes and/or actions based upon a belief that I know better than God does.

An exercise like this always forces us to go back to evaluate our temptation to believe that in any situation. This actually has the promise of being a lot more than just an intellectual sparring match.
