

What Does Saeppeyol Street Tell

Many around the world die in the war to defend their country's dignity. But probably no countries honour the fallen like the DPRK which has built a new street in honour of their feats and provided their bereaved families with nice houses for free.

On February 15, a new street called Saeppeyol was inaugurated in the DPRK's capital city of Pyongyang. The street was built for the bereaved families of the martyrs who died a heroic death in the overseas military operations to add lustre to national dignity and honour. Kim Jong Un, president of the State Affairs of the DPRK, reportedly named the street Saeppeyol (morning star) in praise of their exploits as brilliant as the star.

The inauguration of the street is a good example that gives a good understanding of why the Korean people devote their all to the prosperity of their country.

In the DPRK a patriotic life is regarded as the most valuable life.

This is well evidenced by the mere fact that the nation awarded the official commendations including the title of Labour Hero of the DPRK to many young people who left their dear home villages and families and devoted their sweat and zeal to the construction of the Sinuiju Combined Greenhouse Farm inaugurated in early February.

In addition, those people who, although they have never performed noticeable feats, have unassumingly worked for the country all their lives in earnest are also held in high esteem.

In 2022, the DPRK built modern terraced apartment buildings on the Pothong riverside in Pyongyang and distributed them among ordinary workers and officers. Most of them did the same job with devotion for three or even four decades. At that time, many foreigners expressed their admiration after seeing the dwelling houses in the Pothong Riverside Terraced House District on the Internet, saying that they can hardly believe that ordinary working people are given such luxurious houses for nothing, much less normal houses.

The inauguration of Saeppyo Street is a good explanation of the secret behind the ever-victorious advance of the DPRK.

Whereas money is held as all-important in many countries, the DPRK takes patriotism as the main factor for motivating people. That's why you can see the slogan "Unite on the strength of patriotism!" everywhere in this country.

Few countries can achieve rapid growth in the face of such unfavourable condition and environment as that in the DPRK. The Korean people are united as one with patriotism. Therefore, any challenge or setbacks cannot stop their advance. This year broad sections of the population engage in patriotic movement, just as they did last year, with the result that production steadily keeps going up and modern architectural structures are being built as planned.
