

Sea Change Brought About in One Year

The Hwasong area in Pyongyang, the capital of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, has undergone a sea change in its appearance. Just in one year the area has turned into modern residential quarters with various shapes of super-high-rise and high-rise apartment houses, public buildings, neighbourhood-serving amenities and other facilities distributed for the residents' convenience.

Construction of another 10 000 flats is in full swing now, following the first stage.

Super-high-rise and high-rise apartment houses and neighbourhood-serving amenities in the Hwasong area in Pyongyang, covering a total area of some 150 hectares

Citizens of the capital celebrating the inauguration of 10 000 flats built as the first stage in the Hwasong area