

ABOUT KEVIN CROSS

I qualified as an occupational therapist in 2006. Since that time, I have gained experience of working in general hospitals, rehabilitation units, outpatient teams and the community.

I first began working as a brain injury case manager in March 2008, and in that time have provided extended primary input to people from a very wide variety of backgrounds and with a broad range of impairments and difficulties. I have worked extensively with brain-injured males with challenging behaviours, but I also have broad experience of working with people with other varied complex needs.

I also provide paediatric case management.

Since forming my own case management company, I have extended my skill base to work with people with spinal cord injuries, mental health conditions and learning difficulties.

I have extensive experience in providing detailed assessments and creating client-centred treatment programmes for people with a variety of complex conditions; including traumatic brain injury, stroke, acute disseminated encephalomyelitis, bipolar disorder, dementia, cerebral palsy and general orthopaedic injuries.

I work effectively with multi-disciplinary teams and have collaborated on many complex discharges from hospitals to the community. I have developed expertise in the creation of community rehabilitation programmes. I have a great deal of providing case management in partnership with statutory services. I have spent many years working with litigating solicitors and Court of Protection deputies.
