Vermouths, and other aperitifs and digestifs, have been a constantly popular part of the drink's world for decades.

• Sweet Vermouth •

often called sweet red vermouth or vermouth rosso, as the most popular ones have a deep red colour, or Italian vermouth, after the country where the style was popularised.

• Dry Vermouth •

a key ingredient of the Martini cocktail, these white vermouths are less commonly drunk neat, but can be a refreshing aperitif.

• Amaro •

The Italian for 'bitter', amaro is an herbal liqueur that is usually drunk as a digestif. Produced by macerating herbs and spices in alcohol, then bottled at around 30% abv.

• Barolo Chinato •

Cinchona bark is steeped in Barolo wine (a full-bodied red made from the Nebbiolo grape) and flavoured with herbs and spices to produce a full-bodied robust digestif around 16% abv.

• Fernet •

Fernet is an extra-bitter style of amaro, produced by adding herbs and spices to spirit, and usually bottled at around 40% ABV.

Vermouth is an aromatised fortified wine, made by adding botanicals to wine which has had spirit added to it. They are usually around 15%-20% alcohol by volume (ABV) and come in a variety of different styles.

• Rum & Rhum •

The multi-coloured tapestry of rum styles spanning the Caribbean, Central and South America is as rich as the history and culture that encircles this great spirit. From cocktail-friendly white rum through to mellow golden examples all the way to molassesrich navy bottlings. No other drink spans such a spectrum of colours and flavours.

Each country and every distillery has its own unique take on this most versatile of spirits.

If rum's most obvious manifestation is a clear spirit diluted with coke or submerged in a Mojito, its identity is harder to pin down. From fiery over-proof to complex, sipping-only pot still, each country and every distillery has its own inimitable take on this most versatile of spirits.

Beyond shots, slammers and hangovers, Tequila is a remarkable drink which can express the nuances of its raw material arguably better than any other spirit. The key to its unique flavour is the distinctive blue agave plant, which gives Tequila its trademark flavour combination of fruit, pepper and spice.

Everyone knows Tequila – or at least they think they do. But there's so much more to this world-class spirit than headaches and nausea from ill-advised drinking sessions. It's subtle, distinctive and, in its finest form, as complex and worthy of contemplation as any fine Cognac or single malt.

• Scottish Fine Blended •

Roughly nine out of 10 bottles of Scotch sold around the world are blends – that is, a mix of grain and single malt whiskies. These products are the lifeblood of the industry and the liquid expression of an art form that borders on alchemy: combining myriad components to create one harmonious and consistent whole.

Malt whisky is the 'original' whisky of Scotland.

Malt whisky is made only from malted barley, in two (occasionally three) copper pot stills, by a batch process. 'Single' malt whisky is the product of an individual distillery.

• Irish, Japanese & English •

• Irish •

The Irish may have been the first distillers in the British Isles and, for a brief period in the 19th century, Irish whiskey reigned supreme over its Scottish rival.

Boom was followed by bust – and near extinction – but today the good times are back, with distilleries popping up all over the Emerald Isle.

• Japanese •

The early years of Japanese whisky are dominated by two men: Masataka Taketsuru and Shinjiro Torii.

Taketsuru was famously sent to Scotland in 1918 to learn about whisky-making, studying in Glasgow and getting hands-on experience in Speyside and Campbeltown before returning to Japan with a head full of facts and a Scottish wife.

• India & France •

• India •

India is ostensibly a huge whisky-drinking nation – the biggest of them all if you look at consumption figures – but nearly all the domestic 'whisky' produced here is dominated by molasses-derived spirit (and therefore, according to EU legislation, not whisky at all).

• France •

France is whisky central: no country on the planet drinks more Scotch. But the whisky producers are, for the most part, doing something very different to the distillers of Speyside – something, somehow, defiantly 'French'.

• American •

Whiskey is made across America, from Washington to Virginia. From sweet Tennessee whiskies to spicy rye and unaged corn, the country uses a wide variety of grains in whiskey production.

• Single Malt •

Other styles of American whiskey include single malt, blended and flavour infusions, as well as those made by craft or micro-distilleries which do not fit into any of the above categories for various production reasons.

• Tennessee Whiskey •

Made from a mash of at least 51% corn and aged in new charred-oak barrels, these differ from bourbon in two ways: they must be made in the state of Tennessee, and generally use the Lincoln County Process, whereby the whiskey is filtered through maple charcoal before bottling. The prime example of this is Jack Daniel's, whose iconic No.7 bottling is famous the world over.

• Cognac & Brandy •

For the past three centuries, Cognac has been almost universally recognised as the finest of all the spirits that are distilled from grapes. It has many incomparable qualities: fruitiness, subtlety of bouquet, intensity, warmth and, above all, the complexity of the many thousands of styles and flavours from a (predominantly) single grape variety.

Cognac has several categories, which reflect the time each one has spent in barrel.

VS ('Very Special') Cognacs must contain eaux-de-vie no younger than two years old; VSOPs ('Very Superior Old Pale') must be at least four years old

XO ('Extra Old'), as well as bottles labelled 'Napoléon', 'Extra' and 'Hors d'âge', it's six years, although this will rise to 10 years from 2018 (with the exception of Napoléon).

Champagnes

Champagne is made from three grape varieties:
Chardonnay, Pinot Noir and Pinot Meunier.
Chardonnay is a white grape; the two Pinots are both black. Each brings something special to the blend.

Blanc de Blancs means a Champagne made from Chardonnay alone, and Blanc de Noirs a wine from either or both of the Pinot varieties.

Very dry Champagne is called Brut Nature, Extra Brut, Brut Zero or Brut Integral.

• Grand Cru & Premier Cru •

Champagnes made from the best vineyards in the region are labelled Premier Cru or, better still, Grand Cru. Finally, there are the celebrated luxury Champagnes, usually called Prestige Cuvées in French.

Sparkling Wines

Sparkling wines are produced all over the world, and in a variety of ways – some identical to Champagne, and with the same grape varieties.
