

VISHVAVIDHAN

In the seven lectures organized by VISHVAKUL, Akash showed us the connection of various aspects of the life we know ('Dharma', science and spirituality, history, literature and music, law and order, constitution and government, education, ecology and economics, living and livelihood, and finally, marriage, relationship and understanding) to VISHVAVIDHAN, the implicit order of the universe.

If we look around, we can perceive the universal order operating everywhere from the smallest particle to the planets and stars in space. All man-made or human order is a movement towards the universal order. Unfortunately, the order that the human mind tried to create has today become a terrible disorder. Instead of trying to connect ourselves with the universal order we are imprisoned in our small identities. How come we have been cut off from this sense of vast space? We are in space. But we live in the illusion of the small identity. And yet in us there is an aspiration to expand, to break the boundaries that seem to surround us. But ignorance, illusion and lack of understanding take us in the wrong direction: from wealth, status, security, etc. on an individual level, to extension of national boundaries at the collective level. But this is only an extension; somehow we are still encircled. Therefore, we cannot see the whole, the harmony of existence.

We are in the whole, but how shall we perceive it? How shall we sense it? How shall we understand it? How shall we lose our small identities? Is it possible to lose it in silence - through listening and observation? Who will impart to the child the art of listening to that profound silence at the heart of being?

And here we come to the crux of the entire series of lectures: the role of the mother. The source of life is the mother and, if she has understood the silence of love and relationship, this is naturally and automatically transmitted to the child. If the mother and father have been completely in tune, in harmony, will not the child imbibe this in the womb? A perfect human creation is possible only when couples have understood love and relationship, not merely with each other but with the entirety of existence. It's only when men and women are fulfilled within themselves and don't need to complement each other, that this is possible. Parents who have not gone through this process, could nurture children by creating an environment in which there is complete freedom for the children to grow through listening and observation.

Perhaps in this beautiful earth will be born and nurtured a new generation of human beings not 'hungry or frightened', but enlightened. The children of light who will see the whole world as one universal family, not live individualistic, fragmented, warring, conflict-ridden lives, will live in a harmonious 'VISHVANEED'. This is the function of VISHVAKUL: the creation and nurturing of 'VISHVAMANAV' of Compassionate Intelligence.

COSMOVERSITY

HOLISTIC VISION

Cosmoversity has no boundary. It exists in infinite space and in the human mind. Only a brain that is boundless can perceive and explore the cosmic law of connectivity or indivisible wholeness of existence. Opening all the senses and the brain to the universe is the first step towards understanding the indivisible, underlying connection in the cosmic order.

Simultaneously observing with the senses and watching the movement in the mind awakens compassionate intelligence. The compassionate intelligence perceives the merger of the finite and the infinite and functions in spontaneous accord with the law of connectivity that is the very life breath of the spirit of harmony and order on earth.

A brain that is not self-centered has the potential to be a cosmic brain, and could be a fellow explorer in the Cosmoversity. Exploring as fellow explorer implies exploring together the truth of what actually is.

Questioning and observing is the way to explore and understand. There is no teacher and taught in the Cosmoversity. Only a sharing of observations by fellow explorers.

The cosmos is our Cosmoversity. The fullest potential of the human consciousness, the power and reach of the brain, the nature of creativity, the luminous power of silence are still largely unexplored domains. The external and internal worlds of human exploration are artificial divisions. The scientific, and the religious or spiritual quests need to converge into one human quest in which the observed and the observer, the 'universe', and the 'consciousness watching the universe', are an inseparable, indivisible whole.

Fellow explorers engaged in this quest, in full seriousness, will find a meeting place for dialogue pushing the frontiers of human understanding, in the Cosmoversity. Meditation over the vast unending expanse of the universe / cosmos comes within the purview of Cosmoversity. Fellow explorers, spread all over the world, would be interested in the fullest flowering of the boundless human potential, the unexplored possibilities of the human consciousness. Is the consciousness of humanity coextensive with the consciousness of the universe? Has the universe created this consciousness or does it create the universe?

Cosmoversity will explore the boundless journey into time, space and n dimensions of what, traditionally and conventionally, have been called the world without and the world within the mind of humanity. It will not demarcate between the scientific and the spiritual quest of humankind. There is perhaps no fine line dividing the two. Both are human quests. The same inner light perceives the world without and the world within. Without that light there is no energy of creativity. What is that light? Is it possible to experience it?
