THE UNIVERSAL MIND IN ACTION

In the world we live in there are many, many, many experiences that we, in the combined sense, experience. Each experience is not ever an isolated experience. The expression, in energetic terms, flows through each experiencer. It combines the energetic thought forms with the momentum to move the physical body, energetically speaking. Everything in quantum expresssion is connected. There is not one single movement that is not in its entirety connected to not only the planet Earth but to all connected planets.

We believe, correctly so, that this planet is unique and is governed by universal laws. What we experience however is also governed by those same universal laws, many of which, discoveries in science are beginning to prove. Each of which were already brought into consideration by philosophers and great enigmatic thinkers such as Albert Einstein and many orthers who were in many ways collectively bringing our attention towards the quantum universe. As we continue to explore this universe we recognise our inherent and unique part that we play in this entire. The part is not what we believe we are in human terms but instead what we choose vibrationally in terms of how we express. To view the world within quantum design is to recognise our potential for health and wellness within the planetary system we live upon. In our journey we have outwardly focused and played a significant part in the health condition of the planet. To enjoy a return to full concious programming, that is, a return to truth with awareness of our vibrational contribution we find ourselves enjoying life much more. Enjoyment is not of course the reason to continue, accidentally we may stumble accross it as a side effect, but in the greater picture when we focus upon vibration we also recognise the patterns we were born into as human beings in order to transform them.

Genetics is not what we are bound to experience but what we have chosen as souls to enjoy transformational change with. We are not on a one way street with no way to experience difference unless we believe that and in that belief we tie ourselves to that experience. Here we are to explain a very important paradox that many experience. The life path is sometimes referred to as a movie, this is accurate, but imagine further that every movie has options. Every movie has the path laid out with paradigms and, as some would say, alternate expressions of self. When one path is chosen, it is chosen by the soul with these alternate expressions to be experienced. They are not defined by life upon Earth. Wayfaring through an experience without any influence by the experiencer is not optional. The experiencer chooses, not through the words or even through the thoughtforms they experience, but instead through the frequency that they choose within a vibrational experience. Frequency is in every way a choice of identity and a choice of experience in the future. Here quantum begins to detail the effects that a simple smile can bring towards the experiencer. Being the smile and not the outward focus upon wrongness we transform the future and alongside that we transform the genetic imprint that we experience collectively. This seems like a simplification a nd in many ways it is, but it is also important to understand how a simple smile, genuinely expressed and not with any intention to transform anything can in every way change the worldly experience that is had.

Health comes from understanding the effects of such quantum design, even though the simple smile can bring transformation it is important to express here that there are varying levels of smile. A smile within a smile is the real identity of soul expression vibrating through the universe, sending vibrational paths for the future. To be an experiencer of this the simple way is to understand further the widespread connections that every person in every life expression holds to them. The way of the heart has only the energy of the smile with it. From that experience all transformational change begins to shine and understanding of this simple mechanism to bring health into this entire planet also brings an awareness of the mind that creates the expressions and the experiences. Being an awareness of the experiences, no matter what they are, is the universal mind beginning to unfold its veil. Being a student of light and being the smile, the heart leads the way to discover so many facets to the mind that have previously not been discussed=overed during the human experience. Of course, those of us that have expanded beyond the human experience have had many different insights to offer the world, all are bringing us towards a future of humble appreciation for what they have expressed.

Health and quantum design are a future expression of life, they are not unaccessible now. In fact, in every way, they are accessible now. The way to enjoy learning about this is to be present, be an awareness of everything and relax, it is done
