ABOUT THIS RESOURCE

This resource provides information on Indigenous resources and organizations across Canada to assist Indigenous individuals, communities, and organizations in accessing information and services ranging from health and governance to recreation and education. It is a tool that is aimed to decrease barriers by facilitating access to programs and supports that help build capacity and empower Indigenous Peoples and communities.

We recognize that this resource is not exhaustive and that there may be more services and supports available. We hope that this document serves as a starting point in providing access to information and resources that are relevant and meaningful to Indigenous peoples to contribute to a greater sense of well-being, self-determination, and empowerment for Indigenous communities across Canada.

ABOUT US

Finding Our Power Together is an Indigenous-led non-profit organization supporting Indigenous youth to access support and relationships that enable them to thrive. FOPT offers a variety of therapeutic and educational programs designed to develop community, increase capacity, and promote wholistic well-being. We started as a way to grow connections between Indigenous communities across Turtle Island in order to share a message of hope and solidarity, particularly to save our young people from preventable death. We collectively understand the value in bringing together young people and community members from various communities to share resources and maintain connection; we know we can find our power together.

OUR VISION

We envision a world where Indigenous young people are rooted in who they are with access to cultural knowledge, language, and ceremony; where Indigenous youth have a strong commitment to life through their interconnections to others, to land, and to spirit; where Indigenous youth have support from their families, communities, and societies to develop the skills and gifts they would like to; where Indigenous youth understand that they are valued, important, and belong; where they know their power and use it to help others.

Our ultimate goal is to end preventable death by suicide in Indigenous communities and support our young people to thrive.

OUR MISSION

Our mission is to support Indigenous young people to realize their own priorities and goals and gain access to various supports they may benefit from. We work towards this goal through developing and facilitating programs and services that: connect Indigenous youth with one another and Indigenous mentors/professionals; utilize traditional Indigenous practices and cultures; increase social connectedness and resilience through group and individual counseling; provide training, skills development opportunities, and activities for practical learning and growth; and promote pride in Indigenous identity and various Indigenous lifeways through sharing and relationship building.

CONTRIBUTORS

Ode'imín Mashkiki - Heart of the Medicine, Kaitlyn Wilcox (she/they) is a neurodivergent, mixed Potawatomi and settler Two-Spirit person. Their community relations come from Moose-Deer Point First Nation and Beausoleil Island. Born, raised, and residing in the Greater Toronto Area, Kaitlyn has been unapologetically embarking on a journey of self-rediscovery through the revitalization, reclamation, and reconnection of traditional ways of knowing, being, and doing, alongside their spirit, ancestors, kin, future generations, and the land. Kaitlyn holds a Bachelor of Social Work, a certificate in Indigenous Knowledges and Experiences, and is a Master of Social Work Candidate. In addition to being the Program Coordinator and a Mentor at Finding Our Power Together, Kaitlyn has been a teaching assistant and continues to be a research assistant and guest lecturer at Toronto Metropolitan University.

Kate Russell-Picano (she/her) is a third-year nursing student at Toronto Metropolitan University completing her community health placement at Finding Our Power Together. She identifies as a settler woman and lives in Toronto, on the traditional lands of the Mississauga of the Credits, the Anishnabeg, the Chippewa, the Haudenosaunee, and the Wendat Peoples. Kate is excited about her placement with Finding Our Power Together because of their work with Indigenous youth in suicide prevention and their focus on supporting Indigenous youth through therapeutic and educational programs to ensure they have the ability to thrive. Kate hopes through this placement she is able to support the Indigenous community in Canada and become a better ally.

Tessneem (she/her) is a third-year nursing student at TMU (formerly known as Ryerson University). She is a second-generation Ethiopian immigrant who is currently completing her placement at Finding Our Power Together. Tessneem was drawn to Finding Our power Together because of their dedication to preventing suicide through sharing knowledge, spirit, and culture. She hopes that through collaboration and support, she can help Indigenous youth find their power and reach their goals.

DISCUSSION

While compiling this document, we as contributors noticed gaps in the organizations and resources available. The main gap we noticed was a lack of resources in organizations in the territories and eastern provinces of Canada. For instance, we noticed limited access to healthcare that is holistic to the Indigenous population's health needs, as we found very few Indigenous-oriented primary health care services. Furthermore, we noticed a gap in the number of legal support services available to the Indigenous population, as well as a disparity in financial organizations and institutions that assist with their financial needs.

We found that there are many family, child and youth support services, community and nation supports, and friendship centres across Canada. These organizations play a critical role in supporting Indigenous communities by providing essential services, resources, and programs. For example, friendship centers, are community-based organizations that provide services based on community needs, including cultural programming but vary between provinces and territories.

This imbalance highlights the need for greater attention and investment in these critical areas of support. Indigenous peoples face significant challenges in accessing essential services and resources, and the lack of financial, health, legal, and other supports only exacerbates these challenges.

As such, we hope that this document serves as an initial tool by providing access to information, ranging from health and governance to recreation and education and that it promotes a greater sense of well-being, self-determination, and empowerment for Indigenous communities across Canada.
