

SCAVENGER HUNT

Community is a core concept to Indigenous worldviews. It is also a core human value! As humans, we are social beings who thrive in collective environments where we are in good relations with each other. The concept of community can mean different things to different people; community can refer to your geographical area, your chosen friends and family, a group of people who you feel connected to through other means (such as the internet), a nation or even a global community. We can also think of the non-human community, such as the plants and animals who also live in our environments. Thinking of relationality in this way helps us to think in more communal ways, prioritizing the needs of the greater collective, while still respecting individuality.

What does community mean to you?

What communities do you feel most part of?

Which of these communities are most important to you and which are less important?

How do you feel when you are with your closest community?

How could you extend an invitation to other youth in your community so they could also feel those things?
