

Forged in Fire. Guided by Faith. Bringing Truth & Healing Through Caribbean-Urban Sound.

Story & Identity

“Dominican street survivor turning scars into songs. Healing turn-ups. Family, faith & Caribbean vibes.”

TweeterBorough, professionally known as El-Tweeter and recognized as Spirituall, is a Dominican bilingual, multicultural urban artist, author, and entrepreneur whose life and work are rooted in resilience, faith, and transformation. A devoted family man, his journey in America reflects pain, loss, discipline, and divine purpose—shaping an artist driven by meaning as much as energy.

A multiple-attempt suicide survivor raised between two worlds, El-Tweeter’s story is one of redemption and intentional growth. From his Dominican roots to a global vision, his voice bridges cultures—merging Caribbean joy with urban street truth—to create music that delivers high-energy celebration while carrying emotional depth and healing.

Raised between faith and the harsh realities of Paterson, New Jersey, El-Tweeter confronted deep depression, substance abuse, street violence, and the absence of his father at an early age. What was meant to keep him lost instead became the foundation that transformed him—turning wounds into wisdom and testimony.

That evolution inspired his self-published 15-chapter novel, The Box Left Behind (based on a true story), the first installment of a planned three-book series that explores love, consequences, betrayal, survival, and redemption.

Today, El-Tweeter stands as a voice for survivors and a creator committed to faith, family, entrepreneurship, and God’s will. His music, literary work, and the Faith Peace & Love (F.P.N.L.) movement reflect a life rebuilt with purpose—proving that healing, growth, and cultural unity are possible when lived with intention, love and divine guidance.

Music as Healing and Spiritual Awakening

Music became El-Tweeter’s sanctuary and a divine calling—providing solace and direction during his most challenging seasons. He began by writing about friends he lost and the absence of his father, then recording on cassette tapes during his depression years, channeling pain into creative expression.

In 2013, after overcoming significant personal struggles and moving beyond a victim mentality, he released his commercial debut gospel LP, Spiritually – “Guided by Spirit”, under Tate Music Group—marking the beginning of his spiritual and artistic transformation.

Since that pivotal release, El-Tweeter has continued to evolve, releasing over 60 singles and three additional albums fully independent. Blending hip-hop, gospel, and Latin-Caribbean rhythms, he delivers what he calls a “positive music tsunami”—uplifting music rooted in truth, resilience, and hope.

TweeterBorough—his middle name—became the name English-speaking fans embraced during performances on and off stage. For Spanish-speaking audiences, El-Tweeter became the natural choice—easier to pronounce and now celebrated across the Caribbean and Latin America. Together, both names represent one voice in two worlds, united by rhythm, faith, struggle, and truth. He also founded the L.A.W.G. Foundation (Love Is All We Got), dedicated to supporting families experiencing hardship and advocating for love as a fundamental value.

“My music isn’t really about fame—it’s about helping people find their purpose again like I did. We all fall, but love and faith can rewrite any story, because G.I.G God is Great”

— El-Tweeter / TweeterBorough
